Art and Money Peter Stupples, Jane Venis, 2015-10-05 Art and money have much in common Both are spheres of social activity that carry symbolic values A coin is simply a piece of metal stamped with signs to give it symbolic meaning to give it a value a value that changes with the vicissitudes of its economic life or when no longer legal tender with its life as a collectable A painting is a piece of canvas stretched on a frame to make it taut which is then covered with pigment brushed with an image a sign that gives it value a value that changes with the vicissitudes of its aesthetic and symbolic life with its commodity value Art and money come together whenever the values of both are exchanged within a market in trade between artist and client patron between dealer and customer between competitors for social authority These relationships of art and money are examined by a number of writers from a variety of perspectives from different periods in history within different cultures and engaging with different media of art from Renaissance Italy to Pop Art and the recent flourishing of the art of Australian Aborigines from critiques of the market and contemporary art to the funding of art education from an examination of the values that are being bought and sold to ways for artists to avoid an over engagement with the money economy and finally the relationship between art national identity and coinage

Subject Guide to Books in Print, 1997 Art, Money, Parties Jonathan Harris, 2004-01-01 From the phenomenally successful new Tate Modern to the Dia Beacon and Liverpool Biennial contemporary visual art seems more than ever enmeshed in prominent public institutions and new forms of patronage whether public commissions or corporate sponsorships In Art Money Parties renowned figures from the art world including artists dealers and gallery owners join scholars to consider these new institutional faces of contemporary art their influence on art and artists and how they affect the future of art The essays in this collection which originated at a conference organized by Tate Liverpool and the University of Liverpool offer frequently contentious positions on the role of new institutions and patronage in the world of contemporary art For example while Liverpool Biennial director Lewis Biggs delivers a fairly optimistic assessment of the state of contemporary art scholar Paul Usherwood unleashes a scathing critique of recent public art commissions From opposing perspectives gallery owner Sadie Coles reviews the history of her own involvement in the art world during the 1990s and artist Stewart Home offers a sharply contrasting view of the value of the art produced in that decade Rather than an attempt to craft a consensus though Art Money Parties is instead an effort to map out the position of and possibilities for contemporary art in a period of growing public sponsorship and attention The vibrant growing interest in contemporary art evidenced by the success of the institutions under consideration makes Art Money Parties a timely and indispensable contribution to any debate on the present and future of art without experience in thinking about the management and public policy aspects of museum administration Trustees who serve on museum boards generally have a background in business or law but have not previously tried to apply their experience to the unusual economic problems of museums The background papers the panelists remarks and the summary of the discussion will help them to approach their responsibilities with a better understanding of the problems and possibilities of the museum
