Challenging the Growth Machine Barbara Ferman,1996 Economic development and urban growth are the contested grounds of urban politics Business elites and politicians tend to forge pro growth coalitions centered around downtown development while progressive and neighborhood activists counter with a more balanced approach that features a strong neighborhood component Urban politics is often shaped by this conflict which has intellectual as well as practical dimensions In some cities neighborhood interests have triumphed in others the pro growth agenda has prevailed In this illuminating comparative study Barbara Ferman demonstrates why neighborhood challenges to pro growth politics were much more successful in Pittsburgh than they were in Chicago Operating largely in the civic arena

Pittsburgh's neighborhood groups encountered a political culture and institutional structure conducive to empowering neighborhood progressivism in housing and economic development policymaking. In contrast, the pro-growth agenda in Chicago was challenged in the electoral arena which was dominated by machine ward-based politicians who regarded any independent neighborhood organizing as a threat. Consequently, neighborhood demands for policymaking input were usually thwarted. Besides revealing why the development policies of two important American cities diverged, Ferman's unique comparative approach to this issue significantly expands the scope of urban analysis. Among other things, it provides the first serious study to incorporate the civic sector neighborhood politics as an important component of urban regimes. Ferman also emphasizes institutional and cultural factors often ignored or relegated to residual roles in other studies and expounds on their influence in shaping local politics and policy. To add an analytical and normative dimension to urban analysis, she focuses on the non-elite actors, not just the economic and political elites who compose governing coalitions. Ultimately, Ferman takes a more holistic and balanced view of large cities than is typical for urban studies, as she argues that neighborhoods are an important integral part of what cities are and can be. For that reason, especially, her work will have a profound impact upon our understanding of urban politics.

Adult Faith Diarmuid O'Murchu, 2010 This relatively new culture of the adult faith seeker originated in the closing decades of the twentieth century as developmental psychology highlighted the changing nature of growth and maturity at different life stages Accompanied by the information explosion adult people particularly began to ask questions for which they sought adult answers The co dependency of earlier times expecting adults to simply accept what religious authorities taught is alien to adult religious maturity Adult faith has arrived at a new threshold requiring novel approaches and strategies in the religious development of adult people Diarmuid O Murchu charts this evolutionary development highlighting dimensions of conventional religion which no longer inspire or offer hope along with those that nurture and mature and sheds new light on the spiritual horizons which contemporary adults seek to embrace The result is a path breaking book that empowers adult faith seekers to confidently grow in wisdom and in grace and that enables the church to use its resources to strengthen the faith of its people at a time of great change in how people think about religion
