Changing Stories In The Chinese World:

Changing Stories in the Chinese World Mark Elvin, 1997 This is an imaginative evocation and analysis through the medium of translations the author's own of once popular but now forgotten literature of the variety of stories in terms of which the Chinese have interpreted their lives since the early years of the 19th century

Changing Stories in the Chinese World Mark Elvin, 2022 This book is an innovative attempt to convey something of how it has felt since the early nineteenth century to be Chinese It is based on the assumption that people live their lives in stories or as if they themselves were in stories stories that are largely a social inheritance but are also in some measure self created or at least continually adapted edited or extended The author describes and interprets some of the most important stories through which the Chinese have lived their lives in the last two hundred years and their understanding of them He shows how largely forgotten works of popular literature novels and poems in particular can admit the reader to a number of different emotional worlds Together they suggest that there is no such thing as the Chinese story let alone mind but rather a historical palimpsest of extraordinary and often internally contradictory complexity The book begins with an examination of Li Ruzhen's Destinies of the Flowers in the Mirror which reveals a microcosm of the educated Chinese world predating major Western influences Balancing this emphasis on the elite are the poems collected by Zhang Yingchang in Our Dynasty's Bell of Poesy which portray the universe of peasants women artisans soldiers and prisoners A bestseller of the 1930's Tides in the Human Sea shows the crisis of absurdity that arises when feelings no longer coincide with inherited patterns of behavior as modernization begins to take hold Hao Ran's Children of the Western Sands a popular Communist work of the early 1970's allows us to be drawn into at least a momentary empathy with the idealism of the Maoist faithful Almost as different as can be imagined is The Bastard by Sima Zhongyuan one of Taiwan's most widely read writers Its characters interpret the Communist revolution in terms derived from traditional Chinese religion as a deserved punishment inflicted on the Chinese for the filthy impropriety of their sexual conduct The final work considered is a book of essays A Commonplace Fellow by Yuan Ze nan a Chinese American writer who has reached the point where his Chineseness has all but vanished and who is consciously exploring its disappearance

Change and Exchange in Global Education Mei Yuan, Fred Dervin, Sude, Ning Chen, 2022-09-23 This unique book starts from the premise that students scholars and educators should be given access to a form of global education that is genuinely global Using the notion of interculturality as change and exchange as a basis the authors examine fifty discourse instruments e.g. idioms neologisms slogans related to what they call Chinese stories of interculturality China like other countries has a rich and complex history of intercultural encounters and her engagement with the notion today which shares similarities and differences with global discourses of interculturality deserves to be unpacked and familiarized with By so doing digging into the intricacies of the Chinese and English languages the reader is empowered to unthink rethink and especially reflect on their own take on the important notion of interculturality China's Opportunities for Development in an Era of Great Global Change Fang Li, Li Junkai, 2023-07-19 This book interprets China's development and the opportunities it can leverage in the context of unprecedented change and the COVID 19 pandemic. It aims to provide case studies and insights for researchers and offer authoritative information for those interested in China's development. In this book, 20 distinguished experts and researchers contribute their wisdom around five topics: science and technology innovation, ecological environment, the global and Chinese economies, high tech industry development, and international and Chinese media research.

The Chinese Story in Global Order Chen Liu, 2023-06-29 This book provides a historical review of the transformation of China's image around the world since the 1978 Reform and Opening Up. Based on a synthetic model that the author constructs for evaluating national images together with a historical review and quantitative analysis, it discusses the issues and challenges confronting China's image around the world since the Opening Up. To help rectify the situation that most of the research on China's reform efforts focuses on hard power (esp. economic power), this book, which mainly focuses on China's soft power, reviews and assesses its global image from the three perspectives of politics, economy, and culture. In the process, it sheds valuable new light on the presentation of China's image and the world's perceptions of China.

Telling Stories to Change the World Rickie Solinger, Madeline Fox, Kayhan Irani, 2010-11-16 Telling Stories to Change the World is a powerful collection of essays about community-based and interest-based projects where storytelling is used as a strategy for speaking out for justice. Contributors from locations across the globe, including Uganda, Darfur, China, Afghanistan, South Africa, New Orleans, and Chicago, describe grassroots projects in which communities use narrative as a way of exploring what a more just society might look like and what civic engagement means. These compelling accounts of resistance, hope, and vision showcase the power of the storytelling form to generate critique and collective action. Together, these projects demonstrate the contemporary power of stories to stimulate engagement, active citizenship, the pride of identity, and the humility of human connectedness.

Climate Change and the Media Tammy Boyce, Justin Lewis, 2009 It is now more than a quarter of a century since the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change published their first comprehensive report on the dangers posed by anthropogenic global warming. Over the last twenty-five years, the weight of evidence about the causes and consequences of climate change has become compelling. The solutions are fairly simple: we must switch to more sustainable and efficient forms of energy production. And yet they remain elusive. Globally, we produce significantly more greenhouse gases now than we did back in 1990. The sad truth is that this inaction has made climate change inevitable. The only question that remains is whether we can prevent it spiraling out of control. How do we explain this colossal global failure? The problem is political rather than scientific: we know the risks and we know how to address them, but we lack the political will to do so. The media are pivotal in this equation; they have the power to set the public and the political agenda. Climate Change and the Media, Volume 2, gathers contributions from a range of international scholars to explore the media's role in our understanding of the problem and our willingness to take action. Combined, these chapters explain how and why media coverage has to date fallen short in communicating both the science and the politics of climate change They also offer guidance about how the media might shift from being the problem to becoming part of the solution Publisher's website

Climate Change and Sustainable Agro-ecology in Global Drylands Adel El-Beltagy, Rattan Lal, Kauser Malik, 2024-10-30 Drylands a home for nearly 2.5 billion people are highly vulnerable to anthropogenic climate change and dryland area may expand to 50% of the Earth's surface by 2100. Climate change may aggravate the prevalence of undernutrition and malnutrition because of adverse effects on quantity and quality of food production in these regions. This book takes a holistic approach to sustainable management of drylands to make agriculture drought resilient. Eminent scientists from around the world share their knowledge and experiences for adaptation and mitigation of the anthropogenic climate change through innovation in sustainable management of water, soil, crops, livestock, and fisheries. They anticipate that climate change will have major impacts on agroecosystems, which requires continuous dynamic assessments globally, regionally, and at the local level where the major action of adaptation would have to occur. The assessment will require international cooperation and national capacity building. This book emphasizes approaches such as smart and precision agriculture, conservation agriculture, and new innovation and technology as tools for adaptation and mitigation. Several chapters are devoted to the human dimensions and policy considerations with emphasis on enhancing coping and adaptive capacity. This book addresses the picture after COP27, including loss and damage, governance, and finance. This work will be valuable to students and researchers in agroecology, climate change science, and dryland agriculture.
