Abstract: The term 'Honour Killing' is conventionally used to denote a specific category of extralegal killings where the act of murder is seen to have been motivated by pre-modern affiliations/sentiments of some sort. Acts of violence committed against people for marrying outside of caste/religion/ethnicity or other similar infringements where they are seen by their actions to have besmirched the honour of the family and the larger community come under the broad rubric of honour crime. Implicit in using the term are assumptions that mark it as different from other crimes. Honour is defined in terms of women assigned sexual and familial roles as dictated by traditional family ideology. Thus, adultery, premarital relationships (which may or may not include sexual relations), rape, and falling in love with an "inappropriate" person may constitute violations of family honour. 'Crimes of honour' as a form of violence against women does not imply that men also are not subjected to such crimes. In cases of forced marriage or interference with the right of choice and whom to marry, pressure from older family members over younger members will apply to men as well as to women. However, women remain the victims and survivors of 'crimes of honour' and have fewer available remedies.

1 Introduction

A hierarchy of dominance and subordination, as well as institutionalized violence and victimization, are inherent in any hierarchical social order. This is maintained by a variety of strategies, including subliminal pressure brought about by dogma, the process of internalized social standards, and a social punishment punishing crime. For the purposes of this study, we accept Kelkar & Krishnaraj's definition of violence as physical violence, threats, physical and mental harassment brief, all open and overt expressions of coercion [1][2].

Following is a definition of violence from the 1993 UN General Assembly Declaration on the Elimination of Violence Against Women: "any act of gender-based violence against women that results in or is likely to result in physical, sexual or psychological harm or suffering to women, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivations of liberty, whether occurring in public or private spaces." Gender-based violence is seen as a violation of women's human rights and freedom of expression. According to a WHO report, in women between the ages of 15 and 44, gender violence causes more deaths and disabilities than all types of cancer, malaria, auto accidents, and war put together. Violence, in general, is a form of coercion used to enforce the desire of one person to create or develop one's own strength over another. Many types of violence are specifically targeted at women. All these result from the patriarchal structure, which is roughly characterized as a male dominance system that is justified by the best law, goodness, authority, and power in the family and society. Patriarchy takes several shapes and manifests itself differently in different societies. Yet, the practice of subordination is typically accomplished by underestimating women's contributions while also demanding a large commitment from them. A second phase is brought about by a

Changing The Discourse A Guide To Women Human Rights:

Changing the Discourse Georgina Ashworth,1993 Women and Rights Caroline Sweetman,1995 The UN Human Rights Conference in 1993 proclaimed that Women s rights are human rights This book in the Focus on Gender series explores issues of women s rights including the legal background and history of human rights legislation the special human rights problems of women in situations of conflict or as refugees violence against women as a human rights violation women s rights as workers the rights of disabled women and the importance of providing information and training to enable women to claim their rights Focusing on women s rights involves the recognition that throughout the world legal systems to guarantee rights have their roots in cultures which discriminate against women Development and human rights are closely linked and the empowerment of women to claim the human rights to which they are entitled will enable them to take full advantage of development processes

Human Rights in the Digital Age Mathias Klang,Andrew Murray,2016-09-01 The digital age began in 1939 with the construction of the first digital computer In the sixty five years that have followed the influence of digitisation on our everyday lives has grown steadily and today digital technology has a greater influence on our lives than at any time since its development This book examines the role played by digital technology in both the exercise and suppression of human rights The global digital environment has allowed us to reinterpret the concept of universal human rights Discourse on human rights need no longer be limited by national or cultural boundaries and individuals have the ability to create new forms in which to exercise their rights or even to bypass national limitations to rights The defence of such rights is meanwhile under constant assault by the newfound ability of states to both suppress and control individual rights through the application of these same digital technologies This book gathers together an international group of experts working within this rapidly developing area of law and technology and focuses their attention on the specific interaction between human rights and digital technology This is the first work to explore the challenges brought about by digital technology to fundamental freedoms such as privacy freedom of expression access assembly and dignity It is essential reading for anyone who fears digital technology will lead to the Big Brother state

The Routledge International Handbook of Harmful Cultural Practices Maria Jaschok,U. H. Ruhina Jesmin,Tobe Levin von Gleichen,Comfort Momoh,2023-12-04 This handbook looks at cross cultural work on harmful cultural practices considered gendered forms of abuse of women These include female genital mutilation FGM virginity testing hymenoplasty and genital cosmetic surgery Bringing together comparative perspectives intersectionality and interdisciplinarity it uses feminist methodology and mixed methods with ethnography of central importance to provide holistic grounded theorizing within a framework of transformative research Taking female genital mutilation a topical contested practice and making it a heuristic reference for related procedures makes the case for global action based on understanding the complexity of harmful cultural practices that are contextually differentiated and experienced in intersectional ways But because this phenomenon is enshrouded in matters of sensitivity and prejudice narratives of suffering are muted and even suppressed are dismissed as indigenous ritual or become ammunition for racist organizing Such conflicted and often opaque debates obstruct clear vision of the scale of both problem and solution Divided into six parts Discourses and Epistemological Fault Lines FGM and Related Patriarchal Inscriptions Gender and Genitalia Female Bodies and Body Politics Economics Law Medicine Public Health and Human Rights Placing Engagement Innovation Impact Care Words and Texts to Shatter Silence Comprised of 24 newly written chapters from experts around the world this book will be of interest to scholars and students of nursing social work and allied health more broadly as well as sociology gender studies and postcolonial studies Climate Migration Governance and the Discourse of Citizenship in India Ritumbra Manuvie, 2023-01-01 This book offers an in depth analysis of how governments in vulnerable regions respond to climate migrations The author argues that despite the newness of the discipline responding to hydro meteorological disasters at the sub state level is fairly old and institutionalised Using the example of India and the State of Assam the author demonstrates how existing rights based frameworks are used as norms for governing climate migrations However these normative frameworks become futile when the sub state simultaneously contests the status of climate migrants as legitimate citizens Instead the responsibility is replaced with pity making and the state becomes an empathetic spectator who understands the misfortune but refuses to be held accountable for either the development or protection of those worst affected by climate change Those who migrate due to climate change often find themselves stripped of their lands because of erosion and their political belonging to the society The volume will be useful for those studying climate migrations and disaster responses to better understand how communities which are most affected by climatic disasters may not even have a right to have rights against the State they found themselves in Ritumbra Manuvie is a Senior Researcher and Lecturer of Law at the University of Groningen The Netherlands The author studied migration citizenship and belonging in Assam during her doctoral work at the University of Edinburgh She is currently part of the ELSA North Netherlands lab which aims to study Ethical Legal and Socio political factors that influence the usage of AI in the health sector
