Chain Special Topic Gender And Eating:

Gender and food loss in sustainable food value chains Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2018-06-26 This publication aims to help policy makers project designers and field practitioners to conceptualize the nexus between gender equality and food loss while offering practical guidance on and tools for integrating gender concerns into the planning and implementation of food loss studies and reduction strategies and interventions By linking key concepts from gender sensitive value chain development and the issue of food loss it emerges that gender inequalities affect the overall efficiency of the food value chain and generate a poor performance that may cause produce to be removed from the chain The publication provides critical information and entry points for food loss reduction interventions that improve the way women and men participate in and benefit from food production research International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI),2017-11-21 Throughout the developing world women working together with men play the dual roles of agricultural producers and household caregivers and are the key to securing household food security and nutrition At the same time the division of rights resources and responsibilities between men and women often results in higher vulnerability of women and girls to undernutrition micronutrient malnutrition poor health and a general lack of time to accomplish their daily tasks As the global community mobilizes in support of Sustainable Development Goal SDG 5 on gender equality and women s rights at least 11 of the 17 SDGs include indicators related to gender dynamics the social relations between men and women SDG2 ending world hunger explicitly mentions addressing the constraints for women who are small scale food producers and the nutritional needs of women and adolescent girls To monitor progress toward these goals significant global commitments have been made to close the gender data gap Closing this data gap means paying close attention to gender dynamics in all of IFPRI s strategic research areas Inclusive and efficient value chains: Highlights, lessons learned, and priorities for one CGIAR CGIAR Research Program on Policies, Institutions, and Markets (PIM),2021-06-01 At the start of CGIAR Research Program on Policies Institutions and Markets PIM Phase 2 in 2017 and later during the priority setting round in 2019 each of the PIM research areas flagships formulated key research questions they aimed to answer and identified theories of change and pathways to achieve impact In this series we share highlights of what we have learned and achieved and suggest areas to be explored in the future

Involving women and youth in responsible investment in agriculture and food systems in Ghana Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2021-10-27 Women and youth led agri enterprises WYE which may also be operating as family businesses in agricultural value chains have been identified as catalysts for rural transformation given their potential for creating employment and stimulating value addition both on and off farm Given that agriculture and food systems are likely to remain the key generators of employment in Ghana over the coming decades and that 80% of all activities in the midstream of food value chain are undertaken by SMEs in Africa It is very much necessary to generate the evidence to support the argument that family women and youth led agribusinesses have a key role to play in the rural transformation pathway underway in Ghana Small Business Bibliography ,1958 Resilience and Food Security in a Food Systems Context Christophe Béné,Stephen Devereux,2023-03-25 This open access book compiles a series of chapters written by internationally recognized experts known for their in depth but critical views on questions of resilience and food security The book assesses rigorously and critically the contribution of the concept of resilience in advancing our understanding and ability to design and implement development interventions in relation to food security and humanitarian crises For this the book departs from the narrow beaten tracks of agriculture and trade which have influenced the mainstream debate on food security for nearly 60 years and adopts instead a wider more holistic perspective framed around food systems The foundation for this new approach is the recognition that in the current post globalization era the food and nutritional security of the world s population no longer depends just on the performance of agriculture and policies on trade but rather on the capacity of the entire food system to produce process transport and distribute safe affordable and nutritious food for all in ways that remain environmentally sustainable In that context adopting a food system perspective provides a more appropriate frame as it incites to broaden the conventional thinking and to acknowledge the systemic nature of the different processes and actors involved This book is written for a large audience from academics to policymakers students to practitioners This is an open access book

Sustainable Food Networks: Chains of Values and Food Transitions Carolina Yacamán-Ochoa, José Luis Sánchez-Hernández , Javier Sanz-Cañada, 2025-06-12 Sustainable Food Networks SFNs are emerging as pivotal value chains for agroecological and food transitions in both urban and rural territories These networks aim to create a healthy fair localized and inclusive food supply model standing in contrast to the dominant corporate food system characterized by long haul complex and fragile supply chains Despite their potential SFNs such as community supported agriculture farmers markets and urban agriculture have not been thoroughly examined through the lens of economic geography and related interdisciplinary perspectives The current globalized food system is fraught with economic social and environmental issues including the marginalization of family farming environmental degradation and the loss of local knowledge and biodiversity SFNs offer a critical alternative by emphasizing small batch production environmental sustainability and social equity yet there remains a significant gap in understanding their full impact and potential This research topic aims to collate comprehensive research on Sustainable Food Networks SFNs with specific objectives identifying various SFN initiatives across different territories evaluating their spatial dimensions in global contexts and assessing policies that can enhance the social economic and environmental sustainability of food value chains Key questions include how alternative values are propagated within SFNs the critical spatial nodes for these values the role of urban and peri urban agriculture and the interplay between territorial conditions and SFN performance Additionally the research seeks to understand how SFNs compete with hegemonic value chains and the potential role of public policy in strengthening these networks To gather further insights into the complexities and potentials of SFNs we welcome articles addressing but not limited to the following themes The propagation and transfer of alternative values within SFNs Identification of critical spatial nodes for the reproduction of these values Roles of urban and peri urban agriculture in SFNs Relationships between territorial conditions governance and SFN performance Strategies employed by SFNs to tackle competition from corporate value chains The impact of SFNs on the surge of local organic and healthy food outlets The role of public policy in supporting and strengthening SFNs
