Challenges facing the WTO and policies to address global governance

Peter Sutherland and John Sewell

Chairman, Goldman Sachs International;
President, Overseas Development Council

Origins of the WTO's new challenges

The multilateral trading system, with the World Trade Organization (WTO) at its centre, is the most important tool of global economic management and development we possess. Over the past 50 years, it has created wealth in its industrialized members, brought poor nations from backward, rural economies to super-competitive commercial giants, and opened up prospects for today's poorest countries to advance.

Yet, although the institution has already shown itself to be a success, and it has much more to offer in the future, the WTO today is under strong attack. Much of this criticism is a reflection of a perception, on the one hand, that the WTO has not—and will not—resolve every problem facing the global economy and social development and, on the other, that the machine is out of gear, idling, and failing to tackle the new challenges presented by the process of globalization.

Challenges and Prospects for the Future of Multilateralism

, 2022-11-28 Composed of original articles from academics and policy notes from practitioners this book attempts to draw up the state of multilateralism through the UN model and identify potential ways to address its challenges and shortcomings The contributors question the role of multilateralism sometimes accused of being fragmented inefficient and unrepresentative and its impact on global governance democracy trade and investment the environment and human rights Since most of the authors are not from the UN system the content of the contributions provides an external and more neutral assessment of the UN's ability to continue to function today as a serious actor within a global movement in favor of a renewed form of multilateralism Does the UN Model Still Work Challenges and Prospects for the Future of Multilateralism is now available in paperback for individual customers Challenges to the New World Trade Organization Gerrit Faber, Pitou van Dijck, 2023-08-28 Reprint considered Managing the Challenges of WTO Participation Peter Gallagher, Patrick Low, Andrew L.
