Once Again, the Challenge to the U.S. Army During A Defense Reduction: To Remain A Military Profession (Enlarged Edition) Don M. Snider, Strategic Studies Institute, 2013-05-21 As with the post Cold War downsizing during the Clinton administration in the late 1990s one critical challenge for the U S Army centers on the qualitative institutional character of the Army after the reductions will it manifest the essential characteristics and behavior of a military profession with soldiers and civilians who see themselves sacrificially called to vocation and its service to country within a motivating professional culture that sustains a meritocratic ethic or will the Army s character be more like any other government occupation in which its members view themselves as filing a job motivated mostly by the extrinsic factors of pay location and work hours In mid 2010 the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff directed the Commanding General Training and Doctrine Command then General Martin Dempsey to undertake a broad campaign of learning involving the entire Department The intent was to think through just it means for the Army to be a profession

preachers and preachers to be Challenges and Options in the Caucasus and Central Asia Pavel Baev, 1997 That Russia has vital strategic interests in the Caucasus and Central Asia can be taken as an established political fact What is remarkable about this fact is that the nature of these interests as well as the nature and intensity of challenges to them have changed quite drastically during Russia's 5 years of existence as a post Soviet state It is no wonder that Russian policymakers are permanently agonizing over reassessment of these interests and are now nowhere close to producing a coherent strategy of their advancement This monograph will argue that Russia's ability to meet the challenges from the South is a major factor in determining its future as a world power 1 There is no doubt that the Caucasus and Central Asia are two separate regions in the turbulent post Soviet geopolitical space with different political dynamics and plenty of internal diversities and conflicts Even looking from Moscow it is obvious that these differences are of such a scale that no single integrated strategy could possibly embrace both regions two essentially different policies are required and were in fact pursued Still the author attempts to take these two regions together seeking to trace interplay among Russia's economic political and strategic interests and to discover parallels in Moscow's past current and possible future activities This paper will first take a brief look at the evolution of Russia's policies in the Caucasus and Central Asia in 1992-94 then the impact of the Chechen War will be evaluated This is followed by the analysis of the growth of the economic interests first of all related to oil and the increase in influence of the regional processes in Russia itself Finally an attempt to distinguish between the real and misperceived security challenges for the near future will be undertaken
