Fitzgerald, 1995 Johannesburg South Africa 29 May 2 June 1995 Measuring the Indirect Land-Use Change Associated with Increased Biofuel Feedstock Production Elizabeth Marshall, 2011-06 Summarizes the current state of knowledge of the drivers of land use change and describes the analytic methods used to estimate the impact of biofuel feedstock production on land use The larger the impact of domestic biofuels feedstock production on commodity prices and the availability of exports the larger the international land use effects are likely to be The amount of pressure placed on land internationally will depend in part on how much of the land needed for biofuel production is met through an expansion of agricultural land in the U S If crop yield per acre increases through more intensive management or new crop varieties then less land is needed to grow a particular amount of that crop Illustrations This is a print on demand report Remote Sensing for a Changing Europe EARSeL.
