Global Reconstructions of Vocational Education and Training James Avis, 2016-04-08 Vocational education and training VET can be difficult to define since it is set in a turbulent and volatile environment marked by national and regional specificities It can be delivered at different levels and by a variety of providers including community colleges colleges of further education polytechnics and universities as well as importantly private providers This collection reflects the shifting and often messy conceptualisations of VET On one level VET can be associated with the education and training of craft skilled workers or of those who are being prepared for a particular occupational destiny and specific position in the labour market In this instance notions of skill knowledge and dispositions are significant On another level it can raise questions over power and class formation in addition to the way in which these are mediated or intersect with race and gender Moreover there are important political questions addressing the significance of VET in furthering social cohesion and economic regeneration in times of austerity when neoliberalism is hegemonic The chapters in this book are not all of a piece but each in its turn raises important questions about VET its relationship to the economy as well as its global setting This book was originally published as a special issue of Globalisation Societies and Education The Changing Face of FE David Parkes,1982 In this occasional paper seven persons a further education FE officer two principals the head of a specialist youth training unit a plumbing teacher a head of division of alternative education and a Further Education Staff College Coombe Lodge tutor give their views of the changes in further education in England during the past decade Their intention was to write personally and record impressions rather than to be authoritative The contributors discuss the changes they have seen in the environment of FE including the curriculum the students the staff college government and organizations regional and national perspectives and FE s values during the 1970s The writers conclude that there have been substantive changes in such areas as students who have moved from part time vocational to full time nonvocational courses of study in the role of lecturers and their place of work and in the courses they teach Change too has occurred in the organization and in the way the principals are seen However the contributors in summary seem to suggest that despite substantial changes during the past decade similar underlying assumptions have remained about the divisions between and the processes within training and education According to the writers FE has been reactive rather than proactive and therefore has absorbed change can the changes of the 1980s be so absorbed KC Contemporary Issues In Lifelong Learning Duckworth, Vicky,Tummons, Jonathan,2010-09-01 This book provides an up to date accessible and critical resource relating to contemporary issues and debates in the Lifelong Learning Sector LSS This comprehensive book is an essential read intended to support the numerous modules that cover this theme and striving to encourage readers to become critical questioning practitioners in the LLS It offers reflective tasks which focus on key issues and debates in the lifelong learning sector today and each chapter is clearly linked to the Qualified Teacher Learning and Skills QTLS standards so it will provide a practical useful reader for trainees and staff working in the LLS The themes that are covered are presented in an accessible yet scholarly and critical format and are underpinned by recent research as well as policy analysis Emotional Labour and Lesson Observation Ursula Edgington,2016-11-21 This book presents research on emotion work and the emotional labour of teaching and learning based in England's further education sector where an increasing emphasis on marketised systems means accountability and audit cultures have become embedded within everyday teaching practice. Uniquely this book explores micro level issues of the managerial policies relating to classroom lesson observations as well as the profoundly emotional philosophical aspects of these situations which research asserts cause stress and anxiety for many staff. Drawing on theoretical psychosocial concepts exploring the interplay of hidden or underground micro and macro elements of teaching and learning contexts the book illuminates how the presence of an observer fundamentally alters the dynamics of a classroom. The author argues that it is not necessarily the performativity that creates the stress and anxiety in an observation but the individual's perception of this performativity and how it relates to a wider consideration of their emotional labour in the classroom. For this reason the book puts forward a case for ending the formal graded method of lesson observations in favour of a developmental holistic approach that is sensitive to the emotional nuances of the individuals involved as well as the social and historical contexts of the institutions in which they are situated. The diverse use of lesson observations as a tool for staff development and quality assurance policies make this a valuable resource for educational researchers, policy makers, teachers and managers from many different sectors and backgrounds.

The Changing Faces of Ireland Merike Darmody, Naomi Tyrrell, Steve Song, 2011-10-22 Before the economic boom of the 1990s Ireland was known as a nation of emigrants. The past fifteen years however have seen the transformation of Ireland from a country of net emigration to one of net immigration on a scale and at a pace unprecedented in comparative context. As a result Irish society has become more diverse in terms of nationality, language, ethnicity and religious affiliation and these changes are now clearly reflected in the composition of both primary and secondary schools, presenting these with challenges as well as opportunities. Despite the increased number of ethnically diverse immigrant children and young people in Ireland, currently there is a paucity of information about aspects of their lives in Ireland. This book is aimed at contributing to this gap in knowledge. This edited collection will be of interest to researchers in the fields of migration studies, childhood studies, education studies, human geography, sociology, applied social studies, social work, health studies and psychology. It will also be a useful resource to educators, social workers, youth workers and community members working with or preparing to work with children with immigrant and ethnic minority backgrounds in Ireland.
