Changing The Rules:

The changing rules on the use of force in international law Tarcisio Gazzini, 2022-12-20 Now available as an eBook for the first time this 2006 book from the Melland Schill series considers the main legal issues concerning the use of force by international organisations and states It assesses the achievements and failures of the United Nations collective security system and discusses the prospects ahead It also deals with the use of force by states in self defence and on other legal grounds The book discusses to what extent the rules on the use of force have evolved since the end of the Cold War in order to meet the needs of the international community It focuses in particular on the military operations directed against terrorism and weapons of mass destruction The research is developed from the standpoint of the sources of international law It rejects a static vision of the rules on the use of force including those enshrined in the UN Charter Rather it highlights the interaction between conventional and customary international law and the exposure of both sources to state practice

Making and Changing Law in Small Jurisdictions Caroline Morris, 2024-03-12 This book puts the spotlight on a different and neglected aspect of law drafting and reform the question of size Specifically how does the size of a jurisdiction affect its ability to make and change its laws Some of the challenges affecting small jurisdictions include a lack of resources and paucity of policy drafting capacity the pressures and pull from sources outside the jurisdiction e g international bodies or NGOs larger states treaty commitments a vulnerability to domestic capture e g criminal elements big local businesses strong domestic lobby groups weak bad governance e g laws or institutions which themselves do not encourage or promote good governance reflection and reform the legacy of colonial legal systems and their interaction with indigenous or customary laws and struggles to comply with constitutional norms such as accountability and transparency Despite these difficulties small jurisdictions also have certain advantages when it comes to making and reforming law they can be flexible and creative they can legislate very quickly if the political will is there and there is strong informal formal accountability in a small jurisdiction This edited collection explores law reform and law drafting in small jurisdictions through the themes of sovereignty the impact of colonialism and legal plurality the challenges of harmonising laws at regional and international levels and constitutional reform Of use to researchers and practitioners alike JoDS 2 Stefano Spaccapietra, Elisa Bertino, Sushil Jajodia, Roger B. Panama Canal Commission, 1993 Special edition of the Federal register containing a codification of documents of general applicability and future effect as of with ancillaries Explaining Institutional Change in Europe Adrienne Heritier, 2007-01-25 How and why do institutions change Institutions understood as rules of behaviour constraining and facilitating social interaction are subject to different forms and processes of change A change may be designed intentionally on a large scale and then be followed by a period of only incremental adjustments to new conditions But institutions may also emerge as informal rules persist for a long time and only be formalized later Why The causes processes and outcomes of institutional change raise a number of conceptual theoretical and empirical questions While we know a lot about the creation of institutions relatively little research has been conducted about their transformation once they have been put into place Attention has focused on politically salient events of change such as the Intergovernmental Conferences of Treaty reform In focussing on such grand events we overlook inconspicuous changes of European institutional rules that are occurring on a daily basis Thus the European Parliament has gradually acquired a right of investing individual Commissioners This has never been an issue in the negotiations of formal treaty revisions Or the decision making rules under which the European Parliament participates in the legislative process have drastically changed over the last decades starting from a modest consultation ending up with codecision The book discusses various theories accounting for long term institutional change and explores them on the basis of five important institutional rules in the European Union It proposes typical sequences of long term institutional change and their theorization which hold for other contexts as well if the number of actors and their goals are clearly defined and interaction takes place under the shadow of the future Perspectives for Biodiversity and Ecosystems Carsten Hobohm, 2021-02-05 The novelty of the book is a strong focus on perception perspectives and prediction by scientists with profound insight into the ecology of ecosystems or into human demands and activity The challenge is to bridge from empirical data and the knowledge of the past to the possibilities of the performance in the future We assume that there is scope for more cooperation between the fields of ecology and practical philosophy or other social sciences in organising ecosystems and shaping the cultural future of humankind and that such collaboration should be accorded considerably more priority This book deals with environmental processes seen within a framework of the nature of ecosystems and human cultures The future of the environment the development of ecosystems and effective nature conservation management are the essentials of this book Human nature and culture and in particular their interactions are interpreted as a set of rules and as given The aim is not only to assess the significance of human influence on species composition and biodiversity but also to weigh up the subsequent potentials for action In this book we will analyze the problems independently of one another even if they are interconnected This book focuses on perspectives and prognoses for the impacts of anthropogenic activity on ecosystems and thus on species conservation Its goal is to improve assessments of the impacts of human activity on the environment We are aware that prognoses have very often proven to be false It is difficult to impossible to be able to predict with precision how evolution and ecosystems will change in future under anthropogenic influence This strengthens our resolve to attempt to retain the highest possible degree of scientific integrity and professionalism and not to shy away from expressing the uncertainty of our own ideas and prognoses We venture prognoses in this book and we will fail However we hope that we will be wrong on the right side

The Diversity of Modern Capitalism Bruno Amable, 2003-12-04 This book considers why institutional forms of modern capitalist economies differ internationally and proposes a typology of capitalism based on the theory of institutional complementarity Different economic models are not simply characterized by different institutional forms but also by particular patterns of interaction between complementary institutions which are the core characteristics of these models Institutions are not just simply devices which would be chosen by social engineers in order to perform a function as efficiently as possible they are the outcome of a political economy process Therefore institutional change should be envisaged not as a move towards a hypothetical one best way but as a result of socio political compromises Based on a theory of institutions and comparative capitalism the book proposes an analysis of the diversity of modern economies from America to Korea and identifies five different models the market based Anglo Saxon model Asian capitalism the Continental European model the social democratic economies and the Mediterranean model Each of these types of capitalism is characterized by specific institutional complementarities The question of the stability of the Continental European model of capitalism has been open since the beginning of the 1990s inferior macroeconomic performance compared to Anglo Saxon economies alleged unsustainability of its welfare systems too rigid markets etc The book examines the institutional transformations that have taken place within Continental European economies and analyses the political project behind the attempts at transforming the Continental model It argues that Continental European economies will most likely stay very different from the market based economies and caat political strategies promoting institutional change aiming at convergence with the Anglo Saxon model are bound to meet considerable opposition
