que le dominium terrae confère à chaque homme un droit originaire d'utiliser la terre. Dans l'absolu, ce droit semble certes se contredire car il est impossible que tous en jouissent pleinement en même temps. Mais le droit kantien et fichtien, en fondant en matière de propriété sur une loi permissive, permet de concevoir un système de la propriété qui permette la coexistence des libertés de tous en les restreignant mutuellement autant que nécessaire, mais de manière égale pour tous. Le système fichtien reconnaît à tous le droit d'une propriété de moyens de production qui permette d'assurer sa subsistance, son agrément et ses loisirs en travaillant. Pour autant, Fichte évite lescueils qui accompagnent trop souvent la planification économique, qu'il est aisé de préconiser. Son modèle économique et social laisse librement place à l'initiative et à l'entreprise individuelles, ainsi qu'au libre choix de son mode de vie. Il permet également de penser comment, dans ce même cadre de justice, peut avoir lieu le progrès économique qui exige l'investissement, une division du travail croissante, l'adaptation de la production et du travail au marché, etc.
