Mittelman, 2020-08-04 Why the paradigm of the world class university is an implausible dream for most institutions of higher education Universities have become major actors on the global stage Yet as they strive to be world class institutions of higher education are shifting away from their core missions of cultivating democratic citizenship fostering critical thinking and safeguarding academic freedom In the contest to raise their national and global profiles universities are embracing a new form of utilitarianism one that favors market power over academic values In this book James Mittelman explains why the world class university is an implausible dream for most institutions and proposes viable alternatives that can help universities thrive in today's competitive global environment Mittelman traces how the scale reach and impact of higher education institutions expanded exponentially in the post World War II era and how the market led educational model became widespread Drawing on his own groundbreaking fieldwork he offers three case studies the United States which exemplifies market oriented educational globalization Finland representative of the strong public sphere and Uganda a postcolonial country with a historically public but now increasingly private university system Mittelman shows that the world class paradigm is untenable for all but a small group of wealthy research intensive universities primarily in the global North Nevertheless institutions without substantial material resources and in far different contexts continue to aspire to world class stature An urgent wake up call Implausible Dream argues that universities are repurposing at the peril of their high principles and recommends structural reforms that are more practical than the unrealistic worldwide measures of excellence prevalent today      The Dream of the Factory-made House Gilbert Herbert, 1984 This is the story of what came to be known as the packaged house one of the few architect inspired attempts to manufacture and market a prefabricated home The plan began in the 1940s as a major collaborative effort between Walter Gropius then at the height of his fame and Konrad Wachsmann a rising star both in exile from their native Germany For both men this was the culmination of many years of experience in the field of industrialized housing and an unparalleled opportunity to make their long cherished dream of a factory made house a reality How did this venture which seemed to have everything going for it turn out to be such a dismal failure The answers to that question make this one of the most fascinating studies in the annals of modern architecture Gilbert Herbert's analysis of the bold undertaking has within it not only the elements of personal drama as far as Gropius and Wachsmann are concerned but it unfolds consequences of more drastic significance for the development of industrially produced housing the world over Both architects represented a formidable combination of ability and experience both had contributed significantly to the theory and practice of prefabrication and had devised a system that was technically impeccable That only a small number of these immaculately conceived and engineered houses was actually sold was not only a great disappointment for them it was a grave shock to the whole movement for industrially produced housing The facts of the Gropius Wachsman case now fully disclosed with extensive visual documentation are instructive in themselves But the real significance of this book lies in its ability to relate the facts to the history of industrialized housing and to the modern architect's confrontation with technological economic and social forces Congressional Record United States.
