Dreizehn Nicht Geheure Geschichte:

The Case of Hans Henny Jahnn Thomas Freeman, 2001 The first full length study of the literary criticism on the works of the controversial twentieth century German writer Hans Henny Jahnn Thirteen Uncanny Stories Hans Henny Jahnn, 1984 Jahnn selected the stories originally appearing as exempla in his novels for separate publication 13 nicht geheure Geschichten Suhrkamp 1967 They reflect his Weltanschauung of the harmonious universe in which man is part of an endless chain connected on the one hand to his ancestors who pass their deeds on through their works and on the other to the future by means of the everlasting repetition of the process of nature To Jahnn the meaning of life was that there are no answers and that man is an unknown quantity The tragic seriousness of life is not without hope however for man is a responsible being and in this world in need of love and mercy he is the only one to provide unconditional love Jahnn's work has been considered to be a repetition in modern dress of certain aspects of the Gilgamesh epic his motifs are drawn from it his characters are archetypes For the first time in English With an introduction Reizland DDR Andreas Degen, Margrid Bircken, 2014-12-10 The migration of half a million people from the West of Germany to the East is one of the little explored areas in the history of the Cold War This also applies to the field of literature What such diverse authors as Anna Seghers Arnolt Bronnen Heinar Kipphardt Adolf Endler Wolf Biermann Gisela Kraft or Ronald M Schernikau connected is to have decided on one occasion to live in the GDR Some of them have found in the socialist country their themes and their audience often in increasing distance to cultural policy sometimes in close proximity Others left the adopted country after a few years disappointed and bitter or were forced out The contributions in this volume deal with the motives circumstances biographical consequences self interpretations and literary results of the migration in the Soviet Zone of Occupation and in the GDR from 1945 to 1989 They honor the literary historian Helmut Peitsch on his 65th Birthday Dictionary Catalog of the Research Libraries of the New York Public Library, 1911-1971 New York Public Library.
