volume examines the consequences of increasing energy prices on agricultural production. It discusses whether it is possible to use agriculture to produce energy without endangering the food supply for the highly populated areas of the developing world. Analyzing the global consequences of the food energy nexus at the turn of the millennium, it asks whether there will be a food crisis in those same developing countries which have suffered from the energy crisis. The editors and contributors are high level specialists of global modelling in energy and agriculture and decision makers involved in food and agriculture planning in the developing world. Annual Report to Congress United States.
