Influence in Asia William W. Keller, Thomas G. Rawski, 2007-05-31 China's protracted boom and political transformation is a major episode in the history of global political economy. Beginning in the late 1970s, China experienced a quarter century of extraordinary growth that raised every indicator of material welfare, lifted several hundred million out of poverty, and rocketed China from near autarky to regional and even global prominence. These striking developments transformed China into a major U.S. trade and investment partner, a regional military power, and a major influence on national economies and cross-national interchange throughout the Pacific region. Beijing has emerged as a voice for East Asian economic interests and an arbiter in regional and even global diplomacy, from the Asian financial crisis to the North Korean nuclear talks. China's accession to the World Trade Organization promises to accentuate these trends. The contributors to this volume provide a multifaceted examination of China in the areas of economics, trade, investment, politics, diplomacy, technology, and security, affording a greater understanding of what relevant policies the United States must develop. This book offers a counterweight to overwrought concerns about the emerging Chinese threat and makes the case for viewing China as a force for stability in the twenty-first century.

The Arms Race in Asia Andrew T.H. Tan, 2013-12-13 This book is the first systematic examination of the emerging arms race in Asia. The global trade in arms is to a large degree underpinned by the strong demand for arms in Asia and the Middle East, the two largest arms export markets in the world. Of these two regions, Asia has become particularly significant, led by the emergence of China and India as major powers. It is therefore not surprising that the rapid military modernisation in Asia, accompanied by significant increases in the size and sophistication of armed forces, has generated attention as to its trends, key characteristics, causes, and implications. This phenomenon, which has become evident since the end of the Cold War, has also been widely described as an Asian arms race. This book evaluates the key conceptual ideas which can shed light on this phenomenon, as well as examining the complex mix of internal, external, and technological factors that have led to its emergence. The volume explores the way in which the arms race is leading ultimately to three distinctive blocs in the emerging geostrategic landscape: a loose bloc of U.S. allies in the region, a counter-bloc of potential U.S. adversaries, and a neutral bloc of states with industrial-age armed forces whose allegiances will vary according to circumstances and geostrategic developments. The Arms Race in Asia concludes that if the emerging arms race is left unchecked, it is likely that Asia will increasingly become a region of instability, marked by conflicts and interstate wars. The book will be of great interest to students of Asian politics, strategic studies, defence studies, security studies, and IR in general.

The Indonesian Production Sharing Contract: An Investor's Perspective Tengku Nathan Machmud, 2000-07-12 The model contract for oil and gas development, known as the Production Sharing Contract (PSC), originated in Indonesia in 1966 and enjoyed over a decade of successful implementation with minor adjustments in several oil-producing countries. In more recent years, however, numerous problems have arisen as changes in economic realities have driven the level of private investment down. This penetrating study, the only one of its kind, uses legal analysis as well as historical data to pinpoint the reasons for the initial success of the PSC and for its subsequent and persistent frustrations for investors The author first examines the original Indonesian contract along with the variants adopted in Malaysia and the People's Republic of China and then proceeds to an in depth analysis of the main clauses and their amendments and execution in all three countries Taking into account various commissioned surveys and emerging policies and strategies espoused by both governments and industry representatives he concludes with a detailed proposal for an overhauled contract that allows for meaningful adjustments or even renegotiation when the balance of interests between parties changes substantially Focusing as it does on some central issues in global economic development The Indonesian Production Sharing Contract will be of great value to lawyers multinational corporate executives and policymakers far beyond the Asia Pacific region

The Environmental Dimension of Asian Security In-t'aek Hyön, Miranda Alice Schreurs, 2007 Northeast Asia is a region with highly disparate levels of industrialization and political systems It also contains some very troubling security flashpoints the Taiwan Strait the Korean Peninsula and the East China Sea China's rapacious quest for energy and rapid industrial expansion have led to intense international competition with Japan and the United States and internal instability as well North Korea poses two distinct environmental security threats famine refugees and the regime's use of nuclear blackmail for subsidized energy Yet there is very little regional cooperation despite the need to manage disputes over energy natural resources and pervasive pollution The Environmental Dimension of Asian Security examines these issues through a regional environmental security complex that explores the potential for greater intersubjective understandings of regional environmental and natural resource problems and greater institutional collaboration and management
