

ENID SHOMER

BLACK DRUM

At last the fish thrashed out of the water as if to break the black bars on his side. One eye felt the air, the dry death of it, then he plunged again in downward spirals.

We had been struggling for ten minutes—a lifetime—over whose world would prevail: his, with its purled edges and continuous center, or mine with its yin and yang, its surface incised into sky and sea, the land like a scar between.

A crowd had gathered, you could sense their excitement the way you feel tension on the line when something strikes.
You could hear the awe when they looked at what I was battling—a creature who belonged farther out, an ocean liner in a backwater bayou.

My arms ached with happiness, my sight narrowed to the place where the line disappeared, the rod bent to a hairpin, the fish pulling at me like religion or god with the strength of what can't be seen.

Black Drum Poems:

Black Drum Enid Shomer, 1997-01-01 In Black Drum Enid Shomer fuses mind with body knowledge with physical being and affirms the capacity of language to accomplish this fusion With clearly fashioned images her focus often narrows on close particulars or leaps to wide angles as in these lines from the title poem in which the narrator is battling a fish We had been struggling for ten minutes a lifetime over whose world would prevail his with its purled edges and continuous center or mine with its yin and yang its surface incised into sky and sea the land like a scar between The characters in Shomer's poems discover the ceaseless motion of living in the body and the inevitability of decay In Notes from the Sketch book of Gustav Klimt Shomer boldly says I have always balked at the purely decorative but then I saw that the symbolic could stir us by its absence Black Drum insists that life on earth speaks of transformation and transience epiphany can happen anywhere with schemes illegal and grand with slot machines race horses dead or estranged relatives and lost love Enid Shomer signals us to make the most of life despite our limitations and in the face of bewildering catastrophe Black Drum Enid Shomer

Black Music, Black Poetry Gordon E. Thompson, 2016-04-15 Black Music Black Poetry offers readers a fuller appreciation of the diversity of approaches to reading black American poetry It does so by linking a diverse body of poetry to musical genres that range from the spirituals to contemporary jazz The poetry of familiar figures such as Paul Laurence Dunbar and Langston Hughes and less well known poets like Harryette Mullen or the lyricist to Pharaoh Sanders Amos Leon Thomas is scrutinized in relation to a musical tradition contemporaneous with the lifetime of each poet Black music is considered the strongest representation of black American communal consciousness and black poetry by drawing upon such a musical legacy lays claim to a powerful and enduring black aesthetic The contributors to this volume take on issues of black cultural authenticity of musical imitation and of poetic performance as displayed in the work of Paul Laurence Dunbar Langston Hughes Sterling Brown Amiri Baraka Michael Harper Nathaniel Mackey Jayne Cortez Harryette Mullen and Amos Leon Thomas Taken together these essays offer a rich examination of the breath of black poetry and the ties it has to the rhythms and forms of black music and the influence of black music on black poetic practice

Irwin, 2011-11-17 In one of his letters Hart Crane wrote Appollinaire lived in Paris I live in Cleveland Ohio comparing misspelling and all the great French poet's cosmopolitan roots to his own more modest ones in the midwestern United States Rebelling against the notion that his work should relate to some European school of thought Crane defiantly asserted his freedom to be himself a true American writer John T Irwin long a passionate and brilliant critic of Crane gives readers the first major interpretation of the poet's work in decades Irwin aims to show that Hart Crane's epic The Bridge is the best twentieth century long poem in English Irwin convincingly argues that compared to other long poems of the century The Bridge is the richest and most wide ranging in its mythic and historical resonances the most inventive in its combination of literary and visual structures the most subtle and compelling in its psychological underpinnings Irwin brings a wealth of new and varied scholarship to bear on his critical reading of the work from art history to biography to classical literature to philosophy revealing The Bridge to be the near perfect synthesis of American myth and history that Crane intended Irwin contends that the most successful entryway to Crane's notoriously difficult shorter poems is through a close reading of The Bridge Having admirably accomplished this Irwin analyzes Crane's poems in White Buildings and his last poem The Broken Tower through the larger context of his epic showing how Crane in the best of these worked out the structures and images that were fully developed in The Bridge Thoughtful deliberate and extraordinarily learned this is the most complete and careful reading of Crane's poetry available Hart Crane may have lived in Cleveland Ohio but as Irwin masterfully shows his poems stand among the greatest written in the English language
