

BLACK EROS is a study of the role of eroticism in the life of the African people from the earliest times till the present day. Among the questions which the author discusses are these: What links exist between surviving rituals and those depicted in the prehistoric rock-paintings? What is the underlying significance of ritual intercourse? What is the connection between these rites and those of ancient Egypt? What are the basic reasons for the African sexual taboo? What is the connection between Black Eros and the world of magic?

Black Eros Boris de Rachewiltz, 1964      Our Living Manhood Rolland Murray, 2015-09-25 When Eldridge Cleaver wrote in 1965 that black men shall have our manhood or the earth will be leveled by our attempt to gain it he voiced a central strain of Black Power movement rhetoric In print as well as on stage and screen Black Power advocates equated masculinity with their political radicalism and potency While many observers have criticized the misogyny in this preoccupation few have noted the challenges to it within the period in the works of authors such as James Baldwin John Edgar Wideman Clarence Major and John Oliver Killens These and other writers tested the link between masculinity and radical politics By recovering their voices Rolland Murray demonstrates that the movement's gender ideals were questioned more fully than scholars have acknowledged He also examines how the Black Power era's contentious gender politics continue to play a role in contemporary African American culture and scholarship Murray analyzes the ways in which notions of masculinity were interwoven with essential movement philosophies regarding revolutionary violence charismatic leadership radical rhetoric and black sexuality Striving to forge a more nuanced account of how masculinist discourse contributed to the movement's overall agenda he frames masculinity both as a linchpin of the seductive politics of Black Power and as a focal point of dissent by black male authors      The Black Female Body in American Literature and Art Caroline Brown, 2013-02-28 This book examines how African American writers and visual artists interweave icon and inscription in order to re-present the black female body traditionally rendered alien and inarticulate within Western discursive and visual systems Brown considers how the writings of Toni Morrison Gayl Jones Paule Marshall Edwidge Danticat Jamaica Kincaid Andrea Lee Gloria Naylor and Martha Southgate are bound to such contemporary postmodern visual artists as Lorna Simpson Carrie Mae Weems Kara Walker Betye Saar and Faith Ringgold While the artists and authors rely on radically different media photos collage video and assembled objects as opposed to words and rhythm both sets of intellectual activists insist on the primacy of the black aesthetic Both assert artistic agency and cultural continuity in the face of the oppression social transformation and cultural multiplicity of the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries This book examines how African American performative practices mediate the tension between the ostensibly de-racialized body politic and the hyper-racialized black female body reimagining the cultural and political ground that guides various articulations of American national belonging Brown shows how and why black women writers and artists matter as agents of change how and why the form and content of their works must be recognized and reconsidered in the increasingly frenzied arena of cultural production and political debate

Desire beyond Identity Wesley N. Barker, 2025-04-01 Arguing for a radical return to desire in Luce Irigaray's thought this book decisively intervenes in impasses around questions of identity that continue to confound contemporary discourse and politics By prioritizing the disruptive potential of desire rather than sexual difference Wesley N Barker extends Irigaray's relational theory of becoming into new territory opening generative often surprising pathways for conversation with philosophies of race queer theory political theology decolonial theory and posthuman thought As a source for reimagining materiality desire is pulled free of a phallocentric white colonial framework and mobilized toward a philosophy of living capable of addressing the twenty first century s multifaceted crises of identity representation and embodiment
