Black London Gretchen Gerzina, 1995 Gerzina Vassar Coll has written a fascinating account of London blacks focusing on the late 18th and early 19th centuries Because of a paucity of sources from blacks themselves Gerzina had to rely primarily on glimpses through white eyes especially those of antislavery advocate Granville Sharp Gerzina is quite adept at culling evidence of a rich complex black life with significant interaction and intermarriage with the white community Although subjected to much discrimination London blacks never suffered as much as their American counterparts The author rightly concludes that blacks have played an important role in the life of London for much of its history A very valuable work highly recommended for major libraries

London's Working-Class Youth and the Making of Post-Victorian Britain, 1958-1971 Felix Fuhg, 2021-05-20 This book examines the emergence of modern working class youth culture through the perspective of an urban history of post war Britain with a particular focus on the influence of young people and their culture on Britain's self image as a country emerging from the constraints of its post Victorian imperial past Each section of the book Society City Pop and Space considers in detail the ways in which working class youth culture corresponded with a fast changing metropolitan and urban society in the years following the decline of the British Empire Was teenage culture rooted in the urban experience and the transformation of working class neighbourhoods Did youth subcultures emerge simply as a reaction to Britain's changing racial demographic To what extent did leisure venues and institutions function as laboratories for a developing British pop culture which ultimately helped Britain re establish its prominence on the world stage These questions and more are answered in this book

Unity in Diversity Revisited? Barbara Korte, Klaus Peter Müller, 1998 Feminist Academics Louise Morley, Val Walsh, 2002-11 This text explores questions of feminist interventions in academic institutions covering both the structure and culture of such places and the social divisions between women Perspectives on the Educational Experiences of African/Caribbean Boys Nisheet Gosai, 2011-09-22 This study critically explores contemporary African Caribbean boys 15 16 years old educational experiences in the UK It focuses on their lives from both within and outside the school Various research methods are employed in order to gain a comprehensive picture that includes the accounts of African Caribbean boys parents teachers and youth workers The study explores both the boys positive and negative experiences of school life At one level the boys narratives suggest a nothing but the same old story of racial exclusion and subordination within urban secondary schools At another level we hear of the importance of education in their lives Of particular significance is the evidence of how black supplementary schools and youth organisations are providing an educational space that positively supports them in their transition into adulthood The study makes recommendations for educationalists and policy makers based on the findings This includes the need to understand the boys experiences of racial exclusion and the complexities around the intersection of race gender and class for a younger generation at the start of the twenty first century In comparing mainstream and supplementary educational spaces the boys identify the need to build an inclusive mainstream curriculum that represents the historical past and cultural present of their lives Importantly the study vividly highlights contrasting teacher pupil interactions between these two educational spaces suggesting what the former can learn from the latter

Faces of Perfect Ebony Catherine Molineux,2012-01-02

Though blacks were not often seen on the streets of seventeenth century London they were already capturing the British imagination For two hundred years as Britain shipped over three million Africans to the New World popular images of blacks as slaves and servants proliferated in London art both highbrow and low Catherine Molineux assembles a surprising array of sources in her exploration of this emerging black presence from shop signs tea trays trading cards board games playing cards and song ballads to more familiar objects such as William Hogarth s graphic satires By idealizing black servitude and obscuring the brutalities of slavery these images of black people became symbols of empire to a general populace that had little contact with the realities of slave life in the distant Americas and Caribbean The earliest images advertised the opulence of the British Empire by depicting black slaves and servants as minor exotic characters who gazed adoringly at their masters Later images showed Britons and Africans in friendly gatherings smoking tobacco together for example By 1807 when Britain abolished the slave trade and thousands of people of African descent were living in London as free men and women depictions of black laborers in local coffee houses taverns or kitchens took center stage Molineux s well crafted account provides rich evidence for the role that human traffic played in the popular consciousness and culture of Britain during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and deepens our understanding of how Britons imagined their burgeoning empire      Slave Portraiture in the Atlantic World Agnes Lugo-Ortiz, Angela Rosenthal, 2013-09-30 Slave Portraiture in the Atlantic World is the first book to focus on the individualized portrayal of enslaved people from the time of Europe's full engagement with plantation slavery in the late sixteenth century to its final official abolition in Brazil in 1888. While this period saw the emergence of portraiture as a major field of representation in Western art, slave and portraiture as categories appear to be mutually exclusive. On the one hand, the logic of chattel slavery sought to render the slave's body as an instrument for production, as the site of a non-subject. Portraiture, on the contrary, privileged the face as the primary visual matrix for the representation of a distinct individuality. Essays address this apparent paradox of slave portraits from a variety of interdisciplinary perspectives, probing the historical conditions that made the creation of such rare and enigmatic objects possible and exploring their implications for a more complex understanding of power relations under slavery      The Activist Collector Christa Clarke, 2023-02-17 Published by the Newark Museum. Distributed worldwide by Rutgers University Press. After twenty-eight years of desire and determination, I have visited Africa, the land of my forefathers. So wrote Lida Clanton Broner, 1895-1982, an African American housekeeper and hairstylist from Newark, New Jersey, upon her return from an extraordinary nine-month journey to South Africa in 1938. This epic trip was motivated not only by Broner's sense of ancestral heritage but also a grassroots resolve to connect the socio-political concerns of African Americans with those of black South Africans under the segregationist policies of the time. During her travels, this woman of modest means circulated among South Africa's Black intellectual elite, including many leaders of South Africa's freedom struggle. Her lectures at Black schools on race consciousness and race pride had a decidedly political bent, even as she was presented as an American beauty specialist. How did Broner, a working-class mother, come to be a globally connected activist? What were her experiences as an African American woman in segregated South Africa, and how did she further her work after her return? Broner's remarkable story is the subject of this book, which draws upon a deep visual and documentary record now held in the collection of the Newark Museum of Art. This extraordinary archive includes more than one hundred and fifty objects ranging from beadwork and pottery to mission school crafts acquired by Broner in South Africa, along with her diary, correspondence, scrapbooks, and hundreds of photographs with handwritten notations      Race, Ethnicity and Social Theory John Solomos, 2022-07-01 Race, Ethnicity and Social Theory provides a critical analysis of the main areas of scholarly research and debate about racial and ethnic relations over the past few decades. The book covers substantive areas of scholarly debate in this fast-changing field, including race and social relations, identities, and the construction of the racial other, feminism and race, the relationship between race and nationalism, antisemitism, the evolution of new forms of racism, race and political representation, and more generally, the changing debates about race and ethnicity in our global environment. The book argues that there is a need for more dialogue across national and conceptual boundaries about how to develop the theoretical tools

needed to understand both the historical roots of contemporary forms of racialised social and political relations and the contemporary forms through which race is made and re made A key argument that runs through the book is the need to develop conceptual frameworks that can help us to make sense of the changing forms of racial and ethnic relations in contemporary societies This means developing more dialogue across national research cultures as well as empirical research that seeks to engage with the key issues raised by contemporary theoretical debates The book will be of interest to both students wanting to develop a deeper understanding of this area of scholarship and to researchers of race ethnicity and migration working in various national and disciplinary environments Reconstructing the Black Past Norma Myers, 1996 This book examines the character and composition of the black population of Britain between 1780 and 1830 previous studies of which have been hampered by a lack of demographic evidence Drawing heavily from data collected from parish registers contemporary newspapers and journals parliamentary papers and the records of merchants involved in the slave trade the author ventures beyond existing research to examine the age structure and sex ratios of the black population family marriage patterns and the occupations of black men and women The Saturday Review of Politics, Literature, Science and Art, 1860 British Experimental Women's Fiction, 1945–1975 Andrew Radford, Hannah Van Hove, 2021-08-23 This book scrutinizes a range of relatively overlooked post WWII British women writers who sought to demonstrate that narrative prose fiction offered rich possibilities for aesthetic innovation What unites all the primary authors in this volume is a commitment to challenging the tenets of British mimetic realism as a literary and historical phenomenon This collection reassesses how British female novelists operated in relation to transnational vanguard networking clusters debates and tendencies both political and artistic The chapters collected in this volume enquire for example whether there is something fundamentally different or politically dissident about female experimental procedures and perspectives This book also investigates the processes of canon formation asking why in one way or another these authors have been sidelined or misconstrued by recent scholarship Ultimately it seeks to refine a new research archive on mid century British fiction by female novelists at least as diverse as recent and longer established work in the domain of modernist studies
