Arctic and Alpine Biodiversity: Patterns, Causes and Ecosystem Consequences F. Stuart III Chapin, Christian Körner, 2013-03-08 As human populations expand and have increasing access to technology two general environmental concerns have arisen First human populations are having increasing impact on the earth system such that we are altering the biospheric carbon pools basic processes of elemental cycling and the climate system of the earth Because of time lags and feedbacks these processes are not easily reversed These alterations are occurring now more rapidly than at any time in the last several million years Secondly human activities are causing changes in the earth s biota that lead to species extinctions at a rate and magnitude rivaling those of past geologic extinction events Although environmental change is potentially reversible at some time scales the loss of species is irrevocable Changes in diversity at other scales are also cause for concern Habitat fragmentation and declines in population sizes alter genetic diversity Loss or introduction of new functional groups such as nitrogen fixers or rodents onto islands can strongly alter ecosystem processes Changes in landscape diversity through habitat modification and fragmentation alter the nature of processes within and among vegetation patches Although both ecological changes altering the earth system and the loss of biotic diversity have been major sources of concern in recent years these concerns have been largely independent with little concern for the environmental causes the ecosystem consequences of changes in biodiversity These two processes are clearly interrelated Changes in ecological systems cause changes in diversity

Pattern and Process in Macroecology Kevin Gaston, Tim Blackburn, 2008-04-15 Issues of scale have become increasingly important to ecologists This book addresses the structure of regional large scale ecological assemblages or communities and the influence this has at a local small scale level This macroecological perspective is essential for the broader study of ecology because the structure and function of local communities cannot be properly understood without reference to the region in which they are situated The book reviews and synthesizes the issues of current importance in macroecology providing a balanced summary of the field that will be useful for biologists at advanced undergraduate level and above These general issues are illustrated by frequent reference to specific well studied local and regional assemblages an approach that serves to relate the macroecological perspective which is perhaps often difficult to comprehend to the everyday experience of local sites Macroecology is an expanding and dynamic discipline The broad aim of the book is to promote an understanding of why it is such an important part of the wider program of research into ecology Summarises the current macroecological literature Provides numerous examples of key patterns Explicitly links local and regional scale processes Exploits detailed knowledge of one species assemblage to explore broad issues in the structuring of biodiversity
