

the term “mind only”) is meant to deny objects (mātramity arthapratiṣedhārtham)” (see, for example, Stephan Anacker, Seven Works of Vasubandhu: The Buddhist Psychology Doctor [Delhi: Motilal Banarsidass, 1998], 413), applies only to what we think objects are, not to what they actually are. But, the ontological implications of this and similar statements in Yogācāra texts are hard to wish away. Sometimes the best interpretive strategy in cases such as this is also the easiest—simply take the words at face value and let the philosopher speak for himself.

This is the strategy adopted by one of Vasubandhu’s most prominent opponents, the sixth-century Mādhyamika Bhāvaviveka. In the fifth chapter of his Tarkajvālā (available in a fine translation by Paul Hoornaert), Bhāvaviveka takes the Yogācāra concept of mind only as a straightforward ontological claim about the nonexistence of external objects. He criticizes it by drawing out some of its more problematic implications and then responds by offering his own independent account of external objects. None of this would be necessary if the Yogācāra opponents whom he met in debate were not drawing ontological conclusions from their various epistemological labors.

Lusthaus still leaves us with important questions about the interpretation of the Yogācāra, but his weighty book certainly succeeds in raising our awareness of this complex tradition. That is no small achievement, and it is one for which we should be extremely grateful.

News Media and New Media. Edited by MADANMOHAN RAO. The Asia-Pacific Internet Handbook Episode V. Singapore: Eastern Universities Press, 2003. xv, 549 pp. $30.00 (paper).

A Euro-America-centric global perspective has been well ensconced for centuries. That the Internet was invented and first flourished in the United States did nothing but reinforce this idea. Asia-Pacific, a rather underdeveloped geo-economic concept in the western hemisphere, has long been viewed as emerging not only in political and economic senses but also in terms of technological advances, Internet-related business, and everything else that is considered to be on the cutting edge of world civilization. Current facts present a different picture: “Asia now accounts for 36 per cent of the world’s telecom market (up from 21 per cent in early 1991, and scheduled to hit 50 per cent in 2007), the world’s largest regional user base of cellphones, 33 per cent of the world’s Internet user base, 95 per cent of the world’s 3G mobile users, 47 per cent of the world’s ADSL broadband Internet users, . . .” (pp. xi, 27). South Korea and Japan lead the world in wireless access to the Internet (p. 28), Taiwan in cellphone penetration, and South Korea in broadband penetration (p. 27).

This rather belated and badly needed book brings to the global perspective Asia-Pacific understandings of the facts and trends in Internet and wireless dissemination of news in the Asia-Pacific region. Branded as one in a series entitled The Asia-Pacific Internet Handbook, this volume is the second publication in the series, despite being named “Episode V.” Its elder brother in the same series, “Episode IV,” Emerging Powerhouses, also edited by Madanmohan Rao and published in 2002 by Tata McGraw-Hill, gives a chronicle account of the developments of Internet infrastructure and e-business in the Asia-Pacific. It is a pity that McGraw-Hill did not continue this series so that it might have a greater impact on academia, governments, and information technology industries of the unsuspecting West. The published “Episode V,” however, is no less valuable than “Episode IV,” despite the change of publisher.

Bilateral Trade Agreements in the Asia-Pacific Vinod Aggarwal,Shujiro Urata,2013-06-17 The Asia Pacific region has witnessed a rapid rise in bilateral preferential trade agreements at the beginning of the twenty first century This trend could have potentially dramatic effects on the trading patterns of countries in the transpacific region and beyond Some argue that these accords will spur multilateral negotiations while others believe that they will irreparably damage the trading system Bilateral Trade Agreements in the Asia Pacific examines the underlying political and economic factors driving these accords based on a novel theoretical framework Experts then provide overviews of political and economic trends in the region as well as detailed analysis of the trade strategies of Japan China Singapore South Korea Malaysia Taiwan Thailand the United States and Mexico By systematically evaluating and assessing the driving forces underlying the turn to bilateral trade agreements in the Asia Pacific this book provides the first comprehensive analysis of this crucial phenomenon Growing numbers of countries both in the region and elsewhere in the world are now considering further negotiation of bilateral trade accords Understanding how these arrangements will fit or conflict with existing institutions in the Asia Pacific and the WTO makes this book imperative reading for policy makers and scholars East Asia Pacific at Work World Bank,2014-05-07 The unprecedented progress of East Asia Pacific is a triumph of working people Countries that were low income a generation ago successfully integrated into the global value chain exploiting their labor cost advantage In 1990 the region held about a third of the world s labor force Leveraging this comparative advantage the share of global GDP of emerging economies in East Asia Pacific grew from 7 percent in 1992 to 17 percent in 2011 Yet the region now finds itself at a critical juncture Work and its contribution to growth and well being can no longer be taken for granted The challenges range from high youth inactivity and rising inequality to binding skills shortages A key underlying issue is economic informality which constrains innovation and productivity limits the tax base and increases household vulnerability to shocks Informality is both a consequence of stringent labor regulations and limited enforcement capacity In several countries de jure employment regulations are more stringent than in many parts of Europe Even labor regulations set at reasonable levels but poorly implemented can aggravate the market failures they were designed to overcome This report argues that the appropriate policy responses are to ensure macroeconomic stability and in particular a regulatory framework that encourages small and medium sized enterprises where most people in the region work Mainly agrarian countries should focus on raising agricultural productivity In urbanizing countries good urban planning becomes critical Pacific island countries will need to provide youth with human capital needed to succeed abroad as migrant workers And across the region it is critical to formalize more work to increase the coverage of essential social protection and to sustain productivity To this end policies should encourage mobility of labor and human capital and not favor some forms of employment for instance full time wage employment in manufacturing over others either implicitly or explicitly Policies to increase growth and well being from employment should instead reflect and support the dynamism and diversity of work forms across the region Globalisation and the Asia-Pacific Iyanatul Islam,Moazzem Hossain,2006-06-27 Presents contested perspectives on globalisation illustrated by the diverse experiences of selected economies of the Asia Pacific as case studies Country experiences ranging from broad political economy perspectives to industry case studies are discussed Australian Islam from Griffith university Language Planning in the Asia Pacific Robert Kaplan,Richard Baldauf,2013-12-16 This volume covers the language situation in Hong Kong Timor Leste and Sri Lanka explaining the linguistic diversity the historical and political contexts and the current language situation including language in education planning the role of the media the role of religion and the roles of non indigenous languages Two of the authors are indigenous to the situations described while the other has undertaken extensive field work and consulting there The three monographs contained in this volume draw together the literature on each of the polities to present an overview of the research available about each of them while providing new research based information The purpose of the volume is to provide an up to date overview of the language situation in each polity based on a series of key questions in the hope that this might facilitate the development of a richer theory to guide language policy and planning in other polities where similar issues may arise This book was published as special issues of Current Issues in Language Planning

Enrico Fels,2016-11-03 This book investigates whether a power shift has taken place in the Asia Pacific region since the end of the Cold War By systematically examining the development of power dynamics in Asia Pacific it challenges the notion that a wealthier and militarily more powerful China is automatically turning the regional tides in its favour With a special emphasis on Sino US competition the book explores the alleged linkage between the regional distribution of relevant material and immaterial capabilities national power and the much cited regional power shift The book presents a novel concept for measuring power in international relations by outlining a composite index on aggregated power CIAP that includes 55 variables for 44 regional countries and covers a period of twenty years Moreover it develops a middle power theory that outlines the significance of middle powers in times of major power shifts By addressing political military and economic cooperation via a structured focused comparison and by applying a comparative historical analysis the book analyses in depth the bilateral relations of six regional middle powers to Washington and Beijing
