Black Mountain Domino Pamela McDermott, 2003-01-01 The Brennans had searched for a stallion to head their broodmare band They had written to Morgan farms gone to see Morgans and it was finally back East where they had found what they were looking for A stallion named Domino Domino was a truly beautiful blood bay with no white markings He was an animal of extreme presence a natural show horse He was also an athlete displaying balance and agility Domino had a very masculine head heavy jowl small muzzle with large nostrils and finely chiseled ears His eyes showed a docile disposition Also he was extremely intelligent It took only one glance to see that As soon as he was unloaded from the horse van 12 year old Jennifer fell in love with him She whistled and his ears came up and his eyes sought her out He snorted at her She went to him and without even on bit of fear laid her face against his It was love at first sight for both of them The Brennans hoped to raise horses that could survive in the rugged terrain where they lived They wanted their horses to have even temperments so they would be a joy to work with All their hopes and dreams rested on Domino and they were well founded He was a sensible horse yet he had all the heart any cowboy needed in a working cowhorse In no time Domino had become almost a pet to the whole family They loved to watch him move as he did lightly yet so quick on his feet when working cattle Domino could work cattle all day then return home fresh as a daisy Jennifer knew he would always answer to her whistle In the evening she d slip out to the barn with a pocketful of carrots from the kitchen for him He d look forward to her arrival and would snuffle her pockets until with alaugh of delight she d give them to him
