the city of the Hague always so lively so neat and so trim that one might believe every day to be Sunday with its shady park with its tall trees spreading over its Gothic houses with its canals like large mirrors in which its steeples and its almost Eastern cupolas are reflected the city of the Hague the capital of the Seven United Provinces was swelling in all its arteries with a black and red stream of hurried panting and restless citizens who with their knives in their girdles muskets on their shoulders or sticks in their hands were pushing on to the Buytenhof a terrible prison the grated windows of which are still shown where on the charge of attempted murder preferred against him by the surgeon Tyckelaer Cornelius de Witt the brother of the Grand Pensionary of Holland was confined If the history of that time and especially that of the year in the middle of which our narrative commences were not indissolubly connected with the two names just mentioned the few explanatory pages which we are about to add might appear quite supererogatory but we will from the very first apprise the reader our old friend to whom we are wont on the first page to promise amusement and with whom we always try to keep our word as well as is in our power that this explanation is as indispensable to the right understanding of our story as to that of the great event itself on which it is based Cornelius de Witt Ruart de Pulten that is to say warden of the dikes ex burgomaster of Dort his native town and member of the Assembly of the States of Holland was forty nine years of age when the Dutch people tired of the Republic such as John de Witt the Grand Pensionary of Holland understood it at once conceived a most violent affection for the Stadtholderate which had been abolished for ever in Holland by the Perpetual Edict forced by John de Witt upon the United Provinces He lodged an information against Cornelius de Witt setting forth that the warden who as he had shown by the letters added to his signature was fuming at the repeal of the Perpetual Edict had from hatred against William of Orange hired an assassin to deliver the new Republic of its new Stadtholder and he Tyckelaer was the person thus chosen but that horrified at the bare idea of the act which he was asked to perpetrate he had preferred rather to reveal the crime than to commit it Thus then on the 20th of August 1672 as we have already stated in the beginning of this chapter the whole town was crowding towards the Buytenhof to witness the departure of Cornelius de Witt from prison as he was going to exile and to see what traces the torture of the rack had left on the noble frame of the man who knew his Horace so well

The Black Tulip Alexandre Dumas,1902 One of Dumas last novels of historical fiction The Black Tulip tells the story of the 1672 lynching of Johan de Witt the Dutch Grand Pensionary and his brother Cornelius by a mob of Dutch men The event has been considered one of the most painful episodes in Dutch history and is described by Dumas with great intensity in the novel The plot surrounds two fictional characters and their lives in the 18 months following the lynching The reader gathers that the main characters are directly related to the episode in the middle of the novel adding to the understanding of how dramatic the event was for the Dutch people The novel s minor plot revolves around the countrywide gardening competition that would award any man or woman who could grow a black tulip a substantial monetary prize Once a middle class man seems to be close to achieving this feat he is arrested and thrown in prison Dumas ends the novel with the prisoner meeting and falling in love with the prison guard s daughter the recounting of the horrible 1672 lynching and the famous quote by Cornelius de Witt One has sometimes suffered enough to have the right never afterwards to say I am too happy
