Black Students And School Failure Policies Practices And Prescriptions:

Black Students and School Failure Jacqueline J. Irvine, 1990-03-26 Research findings by the National Commission on Excellence in Education the Children's Defense Fund and the College Board among others suggest that much work remains to be done to upgrade the educational experience and performance of the fastest growing segment of the American school population blacks and other minorities This country's survival and strength will ultimately depend on the quality of education given to this important group that has been systematically and effectively excluded from the benefits of educational opportunity Without these benefits blacks and other minorities will never achieve economic independence and the self-perpetuating cycle of poor school achievement poverty and teen parenthood will grind on relentlessly This important study addresses the many facets of this complex problem by explicating its many roots assessing strengths and weaknesses inherent in the present system and proposing strategies for dynamic changes Chapter 1 reviews various societal prescriptions regarding education and descriptive practices harmful to black students and uncovers a hidden curriculum The focus of Chapter 2 is on cultural synchronization in style language and cognition and on how disappearing black educators increase the lack of synchronization Chapters 3 and 4 detail the effects of teacher expectations in various contexts including grade level subject and time of year and present a thorough research study of teacher student interactions The last two chapters outline strategies for change and implications for training and staff development exploring Afro-centric responses parent involvement relevant research findings and various staff development competencies for policy development and prejudice reduction The detailed introductory essay the seven tables and five figures and an appendix that provides supplemental information describing the research study methodology in Chapter 4 complete this valuable volume Scholars and students of Afro American and African Studies as well as educational administrators and practitioners will find this work both timely and provocative

Critical Perspectives on Education Policy and Schools, Families, and Communities Sue Winton, Gillian Parekh, 2020-03-01 Critical Perspectives on Education Policy and Schools Families and Communities offers scholars students and practitioners important new knowledge about how current policies impact families schools and community partnerships The book's authors share a critical orientation towards policy and policy research and invite readers to think differently about what policy is who policymakers are and what policy can achieve Their chapters discuss findings from research grounded in diverse theories including institutional ethnography critical disability theory and critical race theory The authors encourage scholars of family school and community partnerships to ask who benefits from policies and who loses and how proposed reforms maintain or disrupt existing relations of power The chapters present original research on a broad range of policies at the local state provincial and national levels in Canada and the USA Some authors look closely at the enactment of specific district policies including a school district's language translation policy and a policy to create local advisory bodies as part of decentralization efforts Other chapters reveal the often unacknowledged yet necessary work parents do to meet their children's needs and enable schools to operate. A few chapters focus on challenges and paradoxes of including families and community members in policymaking processes including a case where parents demonstrated a preference for a policy that research demonstrates can be detrimental to their children's future education opportunities. Another set of chapters emphasizes the centrality of policy texts and how language influences the educational experiences and engagement of students and their families. Each chapter concludes with a discussion of implications of the research for educators, families, and other community partners.

African American Male Students in PreK-12 Schools Chance W. Lewis, James L. Moore III, 2014-05-28. Presents a comprehensive viewpoint on preK-12 schooling for African American males. Black American Students in An Affluent Suburb John U. Ogbu, 2003-02-26. John Ogbu has studied minority education from a comparative perspective for over 30 years. The study reported in this book, jointly sponsored by the community and the school district in Shaker Heights, Ohio, focuses on the academic performance of Black American students. Not only do these students perform less well than White students at every social class level but also less well than immigrant minority students, including Black immigrant students. Furthermore, both middle-class Black students in suburban school districts as well as poor Black students in inner-city schools are not doing well. Ogbu's analysis draws on data from observations, formal and informal interviews, and statistical and other data. He offers strong empirical evidence to support the cross-class existence of the problem. The book is organized in four parts. Part I provides a description of the twin problems: the study addresses the gap between Black and White students in school performance and the low academic engagement of Black students; a review of conventional explanations; an alternative perspective; and the framework for the study. Part II is an analysis of societal and school factors contributing to the problem, including race relations, Pygmalion or internalized White beliefs and expectations, levelling or tracking, the roles of teachers, counselors, and discipline. Community factors the focus of this study are discussed in Part III. These include the educational impact of opportunity structure, collective identity, cultural and language or dialect frame of reference in schooling, peer pressures, and the role of the family. This research focus does not mean exonerating the system and blaming minorities, nor does it mean neglecting school and society factors. Rather, Ogbu argues the role of community forces should be incorporated into the discussion of the academic achievement gap by researchers, theoreticians, policymakers, educators, and minorities themselves who genuinely want to improve the academic achievement of African American children and other minorities. In Part IV, Ogbu presents a summary of the study's findings on community forces and offers recommendations, some of which are for the school system and some for the Black community.

The Broken Cisterns of African American Education M. Christopher Brown, RoSusan D. Bartee, 2008-12-01 The failure of American education to achieve racial diversity has resulted from the inability of educational researchers policy makers and judicial officials to disentangle the complex definitions that have emerged in a post segregated society More specifically the capricious aim of post segregated educational settings leads to the confusing and often conflicting interchangeable usage of terms desegregated integrated and diversity This ambiguity is further confounded by the imprecise definitions of equity equality and opportunity The proposed book will examine the role of language post Brown v Board of Education and the effects of that language on educational policy and practice He also examines how the fundamental implications of language within post Brown court cases in pre through post secondary education demonstrate the unspecified outcomes for desegregation and integration while concomitantly demand an educational continuum of equitable distribution The arguments will further interrogate how education policy and practices implicitly contain a scholarly roadmap to forge equal opportunity and access fifty years after Brown
