Remembering the First World War Bart Ziino, 2014-12-05 Remembering the First World War brings together a group of international scholars to understand how and why the past quarter of a century has witnessed such an extraordinary increase in global popular and academic interest in the First World War both as an event and in the ways it is remembered The book discusses this phenomenon across three key areas The first section looks at family history genealogy and the First World War seeking to understand the power of family history in shaping and reshaping remembrance of the War at the smallest levels as well as popular media and the continuing role of the state and its agencies The second part discusses practices of remembering and the more public forms of representation and negotiation through film literature museums monuments and heritage sites focusing on agency in representing and remembering war The third section covers the return of the War and the increasing determination among individuals to acknowledge and participate in public rituals of remembrance with their own contemporary politics What for instance does it mean to wear a poppy on armistice remembrance day How do symbols like this operate today These chapters will investigate these aspects through a series of case studies Placing remembrance of the First World War in its longer historical and broader transnational context and including illustrations and an afterword by Professor David Reynolds this is the ideal book for all those interested in the history of the Great War and its aftermath

The Great War Dan Todman, 2014-03-04 The First World War with its mud and the slaughter of the trenches is often taken as the ultimate example of the futility of war. Generals safe in their headquarters behind the lines sent millions of men to their deaths to gain a few hundred yards of ground. Writers notably Siegfried Sassoon and Wilfred Owen provided unforgettable images of the idiocy and tragedy of the war. Yet this vision of the war is at best a partial one: the war only achieving its status as the worst of wars in the last thirty years. At the time the war aroused emotions of pride and patriotism. Not everyone involved remembered the war only for its miseries. The generals were often highly professional and indeed won the war in 1918. In this original and challenging book Dan Todman shows views of the war have changed over the last ninety years and how a distorted image of it emerged and became dominant.

Essential scripts and screenplays Elizabeth Clark, 2002

Great War on the Small Screen Emma Hanna, 2009-10-20 In Britain since the 1960s television has been the most influential medium of popular culture. Television is also the site where the Western Front of popular culture clashes with the Western Front of history. This book examines the ways in which those involved in the production of historical documentaries for this most influential media have struggled to communicate the stories of the First World War to British audiences. Documents in the BBC Written Archives Centre at Caversham, Berkshire, the Imperial War Museum and the Liddell Hart Centre for Military Archives all inform the analysis. Interviews and correspondence with television producers, scriptwriters and production crew as well as two First World War veterans who appeared in several recent documentaries provide new insights for the reader. Emma Hanna takes the reader behind the scenes of the making of the most influential documentaries from the landmark epic series The Great War BBC 1964 up to more recent controversial productions such as The Trench BBC 2002 and Not Forgotten: The Men Who Wouldn't Fight BBC 2008. By examining the production, broadcast and reception of a number of British television documentaries, this book examines the difficult relationship between the war's history and its popular memory.

Scene-writing for Film and TV Simon van der Borgh, 2024-10-28 Focusing on an integral aspect of screenplays, this book takes students and writers at all levels through the process of understanding and writing better scenes. It interrogates the functions of a scene and how writers can then apply this knowledge to their own film and television scripts. Author Simon van der Borgh familiarises the screenwriter with the fundamental aspects of a scene, looking at what a scene is, the characters involved, the action depicted, dialogue, setting and style. Featuring original scenes which show the practice of scene writing and the application of ideas and approaches, alongside in-depth analysis and critique, the book explores the process and approach to scene writing and how to learn and improve methods of telling dynamic, engaging and moving stories of diverse types and formats on screen. With a strong focus on practice-based advice, the book includes exercises at every step to enable writers to build on and extend their knowledge and skills with confidence and clarity, chapter by chapter. Exploring the film and TV scene with its different types, forms and functions, it is the ideal book for aspiring screenwriters and students of screenwriting and filmmaking at all levels as well as directors producers and actors looking to better understand the contextual and sub textual motivations intended by the writer The Guinness Book of Classic British TV Paul Cornell,Martin Day,Keith Topping,1996 War, Culture, and the Media Ian Stewart,Susan L. Carruthers,1996 What is the role of the British media in our perception of warfare Are the impressions which we glean from war films television news reports and newspaper stories reliable What are the issues practical and political involved in bringing reports of armed conflict to our television screens Are British military institutions fairly represented and how are enemy forces portrayed How are ideas of nationalism and patriotism incorporated into the presentation of war These are some of the questions addressed in this new collection of essays The book is intended to provide students and general readers with a concise introduction to the main arguments and issues surrounding war and the moving image media in 20th century Britain as well as contributing new perspectives to this increasingly important area of debate Among the subjects discussed are the media build up to the Gulf War representations of the First World War reporting terrorism British imperialism in film transmission technologies and the news reporting of armed conflict the meaning of war toys and war games and postmodernism and military history
