Acting Black Sarah Susannah Willie, 2003-12-16 Sarah Willie asks What s it like to be black on campus For most Black students attending predominantly white universities it is a struggle Do you try to blend in Do you take a stand Do you end up acting as the token representative for your whole race And what about those students who attend predominantly black universities How do their experiences differ In Acting Black Sarah Willie interviews 55 African American alumnae of two universities comparable except that one is predominantly white Northwestern and one is predominantly black Howard What she discovers through their stories mirrored in her own college experience is that the college campus is in some cases the stage for an even more intense version of the racial issues played out beyond its walls The interviewees talk about acting white in some situations and acting black in others They treat race as many different things including a set of behaviours that they can choose to act out In Acting Black Willie situates the personal stories of her own experience and those of her interviewees within a timeline of black education in America and a review of university policy with suggestions for improvement for both black and white universities seeking to make their campuses truly multicultural In the tradition of The Agony of Education Routledge 1996 Willie captures the painful dilemmas and ugly realities African Americans must face on campus

Dimensions of Blackness Jas M. Sullivan, Jonathan Winburn, William E. Cross Jr., 2018-10-09 While the dynamics of racial oppression limit the range of attitudes blacks may construct and hold their basic humanity introduces additional attitudinal variance that is nearly boundless Rather than claim it is possible to conceptualize and measure every iteration of blackness modern social theorists such as Robert Sellers and William Cross Jr contend that one should systematically sample the unmanageable range of different identity frames found among blacks In Dimensions of Blackness the authors suggest there is no single solitary way to express black racial identity They move away from blackness as binary and instead reveal what happens when black racial identity is conceptualized with difference of opinion Using a multidimensional perspective this book explores whether black racial identity differences among blacks influence political attitudes and behavior

Between Citizens and the State Christopher P. Loss, 2012 This book tracks the dramatic outcomes of the federal government's growing involvement in higher education between World War I and the 1970s and the conservative backlash against that involvement from the 1980s onward Using cutting edge analysis Christopher Loss recovers higher education's central importance to the larger social and political history of the United States in the twentieth century and chronicles its transformation into a key mediating institution between citizens and the state Framed around the three major federal higher education policies of the twentieth century the 1944 GI Bill the 1958 National Defense Education Act and the 1965 Higher Education Act the book charts the federal government's various efforts to deploy education to ready citizens for the national bureaucratized and increasingly global world in which they lived Loss details the myriad ways in which academic leaders and students shaped and were shaped by the state's shifting political agenda as it moved from a preoccupation with economic security during the Great Depression to national security during World War II and the Cold War to securing the rights of African Americans women and other previously marginalized groups during the 1960s and 70s Along the way Loss reappraises the origins of higher education's current day diversity regime the growth of identity group politics and the privatization of citizenship at the close of the twentieth century At a time when people's faith in government and higher education is being sorely tested this book sheds new light on the close relations between American higher education and politics

Remembering Generations Ashraf H. A. Rushdy, 2003-01-14 Slavery is America's family secret a partially hidden phantom that continues to haunt our national imagination Remembering Generations explores how three contemporary African American writers artistically represent this notion in novels about the enduring effects of slavery on the descendants of slaves in the post civil rights era Focusing on Gayl Jones's Corregidora 1975 David Bradley's The Chaneysville Incident 1981 and Octavia Butler's Kindred 1979 Ashraf Rushdy situates these works in their cultural moment of production highlighting the ways in which they respond to contemporary debates about race and family Tracing the evolution of this literary form he considers such works as Edward Ball's Slaves in the Family 1998 in which descendants of slaveholders expose the family secrets of their ancestors Remembering Generations examines how cultural works contribute to social debates how a particular representational form emerges out of a specific historical epoch and how some contemporary intellectuals meditate on the issue of historical responsibility of recognizing that the slave past continues to exert an influence on contemporary American society Catalog of Copyright Entries. Third Series Library of Congress. Copyright Office,1975 Blacked Out Signithia Fordham,1996-03-13 This innovative portrait of student life in an urban high school focuses on the academic success of African American students exploring the symbolic role of academic achievement within the Black community and investigating the price students pay for attaining it Signithia Fordham s richly detailed ethnography reveals a deeply rooted cultural system that favors egalitarianism and group cohesion over the individualistic competitive demands of academic success and sheds new light on the sources of academic performance She also details the ways in which the achievements of successful African Americans are blacked out of the public imagination and negative images are reflected onto black adolescents A self proclaimed native anthropologist she chronicles the struggle of African American students to construct an identity suitable to themselves their peers and their families within an arena of colliding ideals This long overdue contribution is of crucial importance to educators policymakers and ethnographers
