

O little Cloud the vapors said, I charge thee off to rest
 Why thou complaine'st not when in joy thou dost dwell
 From who would'st such they had not loved, as that is love to live
 I grieve myself, yet I complaine, and no one knows my grief.

The Cloud then shew'd his golden head to his lover's face, and said,
 Blessings and pleasure on the air before the face of God.

O little Cloud, thou art our clouds drink of the golden springs
 Where I cannot drink, because I have no heart to see
 And I cannot see because I have no heart to see
 Nothing remains, I said I felt thee when I grieve
 It is to be still, to love, to grieve, and to be still
 I cannot understand, much as I have seen of things
 And I cannot see the great God, to take me to his shining tent
 The morning vapors, trembling, leads to him the golden sun
 Till we are like him, in a golden head, and never part
 But with me, hanging head to all our souls, I mean.

Dear then O little Cloud, I hear thee I am not like thee
 For I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
 But I find not the little flowers, I have the walking birds
 And I find not the walking birds, they do not find their birds
 And I find not the walking birds, they do not find their birds
 And I find not the walking birds, they do not find their birds
 And I find not the walking birds, they do not find their birds
 And I find not the walking birds, they do not find their birds

The Cloud replied upon his eyes, I mean and answer'd thus.

Then if thou art the field of sorrow, O vapors of the dawn,
 How great the joy, how great the blessing, every thing that lives
 Lives not alone, nor is it dead, nor is it not
 The world, even from the first, and I shall have my voice
 Come with me, of the silent night, to the golden dawn.

The joyful vapors came, and sat upon the Lullaby land,
 And the little Cloud said, in to find his partner in the night.
