Medicine and Healing Practices in Ancient Egypt Rosalie David, Roger Forshaw, 2023-12-01 Medicine and Healing Practices in Ancient Egypt provides a new perspective on healthcare and healing treatments in Egypt from the Predynastic to the Roman periods Rather than concentrating exclusively on diseases and medical conditions as evidenced in ancient sources it provides a people focused perspective asking what it was like to be ill or disabled in this society Who were the healers To what extent did disease occurrence and treatment reflect individual social status As well as geographical environmental and dietary factors which undoubtedly affected general health some groups were prone to specific hazards These are discussed in detail including soldiers' experience of trauma wounds and exposure to epidemics and conditions blindness sand pneumoconiosis trauma and limb amputations resulting from working conditions at building and other sites Methods of diagnosis and treatment were derived from special concepts about disease and medical ethics These are explored as well as the individual contributions and professional interactions of various groups of healers and carers Medical training and practice occurred in various locations including temples and battlefields these are described as well as the treatments and equipment that were available Ancient writers generally praised the Egyptian healers' knowledge expertise and professional relationship with their patients A brief comparison is drawn between this approach and those prevailing elsewhere in Mesopotamia Greece and Rome Finally Egypt's legacy transmitted through Greek Roman and Arabic sources is confirmed as the source of some principles and practices still found in modern Western medicine Combining information from the latest studies on human remains and the authors' biomedical research this book brings the subject up to date enabling a wide readership to access often scattered information in a fascinating synthesis

Writing, Violence, and the Military Niv Allon, 2019 Writing Violence and the Military takes representations of reading and writing in Eighteenth Dynasty Egypt ca 1550-1295 BCE as its point of departure asking how patrons of art conceptualized literacy and how in turn they positioned themselves with respect to it Exploring statuary and tomb art through the prism of self representation and group formation it makes three claims Firstly that the elite of this period held a variety of notions regarding literacy among which violence and memory are most prominent Secondly that among the Eighteenth Dynasty elite literacy found its strongest advocates among men whose careers brought them to engage with the military either as military officials or as civil administrators who accompanied the army beyond the borders of Egypt Finally that Horemhab the General in Chief who later ascended the throne voiced unique views regarding literacy that arose from his career as an elite military official and thus from his social world Consequently images of reading and writing allow us to study literacy with regard to those who commissioned them and to consider these patrons' roles in changing conceptualizations Throughout their different formulations these representations call for a discussion on literacy in relation to self representation and to art s role in society They also invite us to reconsider our own approach to literacy and its significance in ancient times Egyptian-Type Documents from the Mediterranean Littoral of the Iberian Peninsula before the Roman Conquest, Volume 1 Introductory Survey Josep Padró i Parcerisa, 2015-08-24 Preliminary material
