

Afghanistan's Transition: Annotated Bibliography

Topic: Politics & Government | Words: 790 | Pages: 2

Bose, Srinjoy, and William Maley. 2018. "Contextualising Afghanistan's Transitions: Influences and Challenges." In Afghanistan – Challenges and Prospects, 1st ed., 1:1–27. Routledge.

This article focuses on examining the transition process that Afghanistan is currently undergoing. The text raises several main factors affecting the country's current state: its recent emergence as a separate country, the constant intervention of foreign states, including the United States, and the effect of globalization. Bose and Maley talk about the influence of external elements on the politics and economy of the country, which is consistent with the established question. This source is helpful because it allows analyzing the economic and political results of the invasion in the context of existing changes, as well as assessing the country's situation and getting additional arguments in defense of the Exogenous version of modernization theory.

Esser, Daniel. 2013. "The Political Economy of Post-Invasion Kabul, Afghanistan: Urban Restructuring Beyond the North–South Divide." Urban Studies 50 (15): 3084–98.

Esser's text examines the situation in Afghanistan and its capital in the context of events following the foreign invasion. Considering the work, Kabul became a platform used by many other countries to demonstrate the effectiveness of the applied practices. Foreign powers are essentially trying to prove the theory of modernization by implementing aid programs to ensure security and economic growth at home. According to
