

Review of: "Public Health Assurance in the COVID-19 Era: Current Challenges and Future Prospects"

Malith Kumarasinghe

Potential competing interests: The author(s) declared that no potential competing interests exist.

I commend the author for his in-depth analysis of public health assurance in the COVID-19 era, including a discussion of the current challenges and future prospects. The author has presented an introduction to public health, public health assurance, and COVID-19. However, I propose that the significance placed on prior knowledge of COVID-19 facts could be diminished. Rather than explaining already-known facts about COVID-19, the primary focus could be on new information regarding new variants.

Regarding COVID-19's public health assurance, I suggest expanding on the challenges of public health assurance. The most important section of the review article, in my opinion, is the section on the challenges and future prospects of public health assurance in light of COVID-19. Consequently, the author could add more substance to the challenges for public health assurance in the wake of COVID-19 by describing them with pertinent examples under the following sections (1-3).

Emergency Preparedness and Response

Assessment and Surveillance

Communications

Policy Development and Support

Community Partnership Development

Regarding the challenges of public health assurance posed by COVID-19, it is crucial to highlight the disparities in public health assurance across nations and regions. Similarly, I recommend that the author not limit themselves to listing and briefly describing the prospects for public health assurance in the wake of the COVID-19 outbreak. I propose expanding the discussion to each individual prospect mentioned.

I would advise the author to use primary sources whenever possible, particularly for the World Health Organization's COVID-19 publications and press releases.

Overall, the paper addresses a significant aspect of analyzing significant public health events in order to better prepare for future challenges.

Epidemics Melissa Leach, Sarah Dry, 2010-09-23 Recent disease events such as SARS H1N1 and avian influenza and haemorrhagic fevers have focussed policy and public concern as never before on epidemics and so called emerging infectious diseases Understanding and responding to these often unpredictable events have become major challenges for local national and international bodies All too often responses can become restricted by implicit assumptions about who or what is to blame that may not capture the dynamics and uncertainties at play in the multi scale interactions of people animals and microbes As a result policies intended to forestall epidemics may fail and may even further threaten health livelihoods and human rights The book takes a unique approach by focusing on how different policy makers scientists and local populations construct alternative narratives accounts of the causes and appropriate responses to outbreaks about epidemics at the global national and local level The contrast between emergency oriented top down responses to what are perceived as potentially global outbreaks and longer term approaches to diseases such as AIDS which may now be considered endemic is highlighted Case studies on avian influenza SARS obesity H1N1 influenza HIV AIDS tuberculosis and haemorrhagic fevers cover a broad historical geographical and biological range As this book explores it is often the most vulnerable members of a population the poor the social excluded and the already ill who are likely to suffer most from epidemic diseases At the same time they may be less likely to benefit from responses that may be designed from a global perspective that neglects social ecological and political conditions on the ground This book aims to bring the focus back to these marginal populations to reveal the often unintended consequences of current policy responses to epidemics Important implications emerge for how epidemics are thought about and represented for how surveillance and response is designed and for whose knowledge and perspectives should be included Published in association with the Economic and Social Research Council ESRC
