Approaches To Peacebuilding

Mr. Rohit Manglik

Approaches To Peacebuilding:

Approaches to Peacebuilding H. Jeong, 2002-08-11 Ho Won Jeong and a cast of experts explore the ways in which the dynamics of post conflict situations can be transformed to sustainable peace Contributors focus on designs and models of peacebuilding functions of peacekeeping capacity building through negotiations reconciliation the role of gender in social reconstruction and policy coordination among different components of peacebuilding The analysis illustrates past and current experiences of peacebuilding and suggests conceptual and policy approaches that can overcome the weaknesses of existing strategies

Positive Approaches to Peacebuilding Cynthia Sampson, Mohammed Abu-Nimer, Claudia Liebler, 2009-10-30 In a highly readable fashion this text combines theory and case studies domestic and international experiences and advocacy of innovative approaches to peacebuilding along with appropriate caution against simplistic application of these practices

Approaches to Peacebuilding Ho-Won Jeong, 2002 Encyclopedia of Violence, Peace, and Conflict Lester R. Kurtz, Jennifer E. Turpin, 1999-08-10 The Encyclopedia of Violence Peace and Conflict a three volume set written by more than 200 eminent contributors from around the world takes advantage of increasing worldwide awareness in the public private commercial and academic sectors about manifestations of violence in all segments of society While the contributors do not use these volumes to make specific arguments they do describe and clarify the developments in thought that have led to current theories about and positions on violence and peace Our reviewers consistently note that while many in depth studies of war peace and aggression exist the attendant specialization keeps scholars from learning about related fields No publication competing with the Encyclopedia of Violence Peace and Conflict can satisfy their need for a vast introductory work to such a diverse and socially important field This major work includes more than 190 multidisciplinary articles with over 1 000 cross references and more than 2 000 bibliography entries for further reading which are arranged alphabetically for easy access More than 190 multidisciplinary articles with over 1 000 cross references Article outline and glossary of key terms begin each article Entries arranged alphabetically for easy access Three volume set with subject index of over 750 entries Articles written by more than 200 eminent contributors from around the world

Conflict Management and Peacebuilding Necla Tschirgi, 2011 The field of conflict management continues to expand as the sources and nature of contemporary conflicts change in varied ways New actors newly emerging issue areas and novel approaches challenge established paradigms It is becoming increasingly difficult to define the scope and parameters of the field At the macro level intra state conflicts constitute one of the greatest areas of concern for scholars and practitioners alike There is a rapidly growing body of knowledge and practice that now fall under the expanded rubric of conflict prevention conflict resolution conflict management and peacebuilding Despite this rapid growth two nagging problems persist The first relates to the continued absence of voices from conflict affected countries The field remains largely dominated by Northerners more accurately male Northern scholars and practitioners and thereby exhibits certain serious mental blinders The second which is inevitably linked to the first relates to the continuing disconnect between local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding While making a strong plea for more systematic and concerted efforts to support the development of the field of conflict management and peacebuilding in the South this paper will focus on the gap between local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding The paper is part of ongoing research on local perspectives on peacebuilding For the Istanbul conference the paper will specifically address the difficulties involved in aligning local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding It will be based upon the rich body of literature on international peacebuilding as well as selected case studies from Africa the Balkans and Central Asia that examine local perspectives on peacebuilding In addition the paper will review the recent policy discourse by international actors especially the United Nations and donor governments on local ownership of continuing gap between rhetoric and reality Ongoing research indicates that there are important areas where local and international approaches to peacebuilding tend to diverge Six key areas include

- 1 Conflict Analysis International actors often bring a standard analytical template and a limited understanding of any given country which contribute to underestimating the deep rooted social cultural and historical dimensions of a conflict Conversely local actors are often too close to the conflict to see it in its totality or in a larger comparative perspective
- 2 Mapping of Conflict Actors An accurate mapping of conflict actors their motives interests and strategies is essential to peacemaking and peacebuilding Yet research suggests that internal and external actors have different perceptions of the most relevant actors and their roles as connectors dividers or spoilers With the burgeoning literature on regional conflict formations and transnational threats the role of external actors including the UN IFIs and aid donors as critical players in local conflicts is increasingly being recognized
- 3 Assessing Local Capacities for Peace Multiple case studies suggest that external actors approach local capacity building from a perspective of capacity deficits Many needs assessment frameworks start with an analysis of gaps limitations and weaknesses On the other hand local actors view conflict management peacebuilding through an assessment of existing assets including indigenous authority structures local elites religious leaders people's voices and civil society which are often not visible to international actors who tend to deal primarily with government authorities or selected national counterparts
- 4 Identifying Peacebuilding Priorities While there is consensus that security is a prerequisite for sustainable peace external and internal actors differ as to the timing and sequencing of peacebuilding priorities including the trade off between competing issues such as employment and poverty alleviation before liberalization stabilization before democracy justice before reconciliation
- 5 Prioritizing Local Ownership There is strong evidence that despite their declared commitment to local ownership external approaches to peacebuilding crowd out or replace local capacities and local level initiatives Yet there are divergent views at the local level as to what constitutes local ownership
- 6 Time Frame for Peacebuilding Perhaps the sharpest difference between internal and external perspectives on peacebuilding revolves around the essential time frame External actors are often guided by artificial timelines linked to UN mandates donor frameworks and project funding cycles while local actors view peace in generational terms These are only some the most common and consistent findings that are emerging from an initial analysis of selected case studies from Africa the Balkans and Central Asia However they provide important insights into why there needs to be a deeper investigation of the persistent gaps between local and international approaches to conflict management and peacebuilding especially if international actors are serious about enhancing local ownership One area that merits special attention is a comparative analysis of the conflict management strategies and mechanisms employed by different internal actors at the local sub national and national levels What is becoming evident is that there is little knowledge of the different conflict management and peacebuilding efforts undertaken at multiple levels by numerous domestic actors and the extent to which they contribute to a larger national strategy which then becomes the foundation for a stronger alignment between national and international approaches However deeper understanding of national and local level processes and mechanisms would require strengthening of the field of conflict management in the South as well as the increased participation of Southern academics and practitioners from conflict affected countries in long term research alongside their Northern counterparts

An Ethnographic Approach to Peacebuilding Gearoid Millar,2014-04-24 This book aims to outline and promote an ethnographic approach to evaluating international peacebuilding interventions in transitional states While the evaluation of peacebuilding and transitional justice efforts has been a growing concern in recent years too often evaluations assess projects based on locally irrelevant measures reinforce the status quo distribution of power in transitional situations and uncritically accept the implicit conceptions of the funders planners and administrators of such projects This book argues that evaluating the effects of peacebuilding interventions demands an understanding of the local and culturally variable context of intervention Throughout the book the author draws on real world examples from extensive fieldwork in Sierra Leone to argue that local experiences should be considered the primary measure of a peacebuilding project s success An ethnographic approach recognizes diversity in conceptions of peace justice development and reconciliation and takes local approaches and local critiques of the international agenda seriously It can help to empower local actors hold the international peacebuilding industry accountable to its supposed beneficiaries and challenge the Western centric ideas of what peace entails and how peacebuilding is achieved This book will be of much interest to students and scholars of peacebuilding peace and conflict studies transitional justice African politics ethnography International Relations and security studies as well as practitioners working in the field

Peace Figuration after International Intervention Gözim Visoka,2016-07-01 This book examines the adverse impacts of liberal peacebuilding in conflict affected societies It introduces peace figuration as a new analytical framework for studying the intentionality performativity and consequences of liberal peacebuilding The work challenges current theories and views and searches for alternative non conflicted research avenues that are suitable for understanding how peacebuilding intentions are made how different events shape peace outcomes and what are the consequences of peacebuilding interventions Drawing on detailed case studies of peacebuilding in Bosnia and Herzegovina Kosovo and Timor Leste the book argues that attempts to build peace often fail to achieve the intended outcomes A figurational view of peacebuilding interventions shows that post conflict societies experience multiple episodes of success and failure in an unpredictable trajectory This book develops a relational sociology of peacebuilding impact which is crucial for overcoming static measurement of peacebuilding successes or failures It shows that international interventions can shape peace but importantly not always in the shape they intended This book will be of much interest to students of statebuilding peacebuilding war and conflict studies security studies and IR

Peacebuilding in Crisis Tobias Debiel, Thomas Held, Ulrich Schneckenner, 2016-01-29 The 1990s saw a constant increase in international peace missions predominantly led by the United Nations whose mandates were more and more extended to implement societal and political transformations in post conflict societies However in many cases these missions did not meet the high expectations and did not acquire a sufficient legitimacy on the local level Written by leading experts in the field this edited volume brings together liberal and post liberal approaches to peacebuilding Besides challenging dominant peacebuilding paradigms the book scrutinizes how far key concepts of post liberal peacebuilding offer sound categories and new perspectives to reframe peacebuilding research It thus moves beyond the liberal post liberal divide and systematically integrates further perspectives paving the way for a new era in peacebuilding research which is theory guided but also substantiated in the empirical analysis of peacebuilding practices This book will be essential reading for postgraduate students and scholar practitioners working in the field of peacebuilding By embedding the subject area into different research perspectives the book will also be relevant for scholars who come from related backgrounds such as democracy promotion transitional justice statebuilding conflict and development research and international relations in general
