Excerpt from Archaeological Researches in Yucatan Reports of Explorations for the Museum In a hillside to the southeast Of the pueblo is The Cave of the Dead Entering the narrow mouth of the cave and following a rough inclined sur face for a distance of about forty yards we came to a crevice in the oor A lighted candle lowered burned clear and revealed firm ground about nine feet below Entering with some difficulty I found myself in a rough tunnel like chamber with the oor sloping upward and pillars of beautiful brown crystals of calcite glistening and scintillating in the light Of the candle The floor was also Of crystalline calcite and in its structure were imbedded and clearly visible many human bones Some had projected above the glistening surface but these had been hacked or broken Off So far as the chamber oor could be examined it was covered with human bones A portion of the oor owing to impurities is of an opaque character but investigation proved it to be also thickly covered with bones For some reason skulls or their fragments do not seem to be as numerous as they should be I asked Of the native hunters who first found this cave if they had found and carried away or destroyed any skulls or if they had known of any one who had done so since the discovery and they unhesitatingly answered to the contrary Portions of skulls were however found and teeth as well The frontal bones were not attened nor were the teeth ornamented or filed Fragments of vessels of unmistakable antiquity were found in numbers intermixed with the bones and clearly indicate that these bones are not of modern burial In places the dripping water has worn away instead of depositing lime material and in the basins thus formed are found bones pebbles and potsherds all equally worn and rounded by the dripping and rippling of the water around them The problems presented by the finding Of this accumulation of human bones in such a strange situation are difficult to solve From the fragments encountered it is clear that many earthen vessels had been placed in the cave and it may well be that many persons seeking refuge from some sudden invasion were caught entrapped by their enemies and so perished or this may have been a general burial cave But these caves are full of surprises by reason of their natural formation and perhaps future investigation which I have in view may solve the problem The native hunters who first found and entered the cave say that they found several vessels of hard burned clay They were perfect when found but when taken home were given by their Wives as playthings to their children An earthen vessel in the hands Of a native child soon ceases to be of value to science About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that archaeological analysis of the first controlled excavations of the vast City of the Gods in central Mexico In 1932 the Ethnographical Museum of Sweden sent an archaeological expedition to Mexico under the direction of Sigvald Linn to determine the full extent of this ancient Teotihuacan occupation and to collect exhibit quality artifacts Of an estimated 2 000 plus residential compounds at Teotihuacan only 20 apartment like structures were excavated at the time Yet Linn s work revealed residential patterns that have been confirmed later in other locations Some of the curated objects from the Valley of Mexico and the adjacent state of Puebla are among the most rare and unique artifacts yet found Another important aspect of this research was that with the aid of the Museum of Natural History in Washington Linn s team conducted ethnographic interviews with remnant native Mexican peoples whose culture had not been entirely destroyed by the Conquest thereby

Williams, 2024-11-12 The first study of Christian murals created by indigenous artists in sixteenth and seventeenth century Yucatán In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries Maya artists painted murals in churches and conventos of Yucatán using traditional techniques to depict iconography brought from Europe by Franciscan friars The fragmentary visual remains and their placement within religious structures embed Maya conceptions of sacredness beyond the didactic imagery Mobilizing both cutting edge technology and tried and true analytical methods art historians Amara Solari and Linda K Williams reexamine the Maya Christian murals centering the agency of the people who created them The first volume to comprehensively document the paintings Maya Christian Murals of Early Modern Yucatán collects new research on the material composition of the works made possible by cutting edge imaging methods Solari and Williams investigate pigments and other material resources as well as the artists and historical contexts of the murals The authors uncover numerous local innovations in form and content including images celebrating New World saints celestial timekeeping and ritual processions Solari and Williams argue that these murals were not simply vehicles of coercion but of cultural grafting that allowed Maya artists to shape a distinctive and polyvocal legacy in their communities
