Monastic and Religious Orders in Britain, 1000-1300 Janet Burton, 1994-01-28 This book traces the development of monasticism in England Scotland and Wales from the last half century of Anglo Saxon England to 1300 It explores the nature of the impact of the Norman settlement on monastic life and how Britain responded to new European ideas on monastic life In particular it examines Britain's response to the needs of religious women It covers every aspect of the life and work of the religious orders their daily life the buildings in which they lived their contribution to intellectual developments and to the economy Particular attention is paid to the relationship between religious houses and their founders and patrons This shows the degree of dependence of religious houses on local patrons Indeed one major theme which emerges from the book is the constant tension between the ideals of monastic communities and the demands of the world

Julia Velva, A Roman Lady from York Patrick Ottaway, 2021-05-30 An intriguing examination of what we can learn about life in Roman Britain using one woman's third century tombstone as a starting point The tombstone of Julia Velva one of the best preserved examples from Roman Britain was found close to a Roman road just outside the center of York Fifty years old when she died in the early third century Julia Velva was probably from a wealthy family able to afford a fine monument Patrick Ottaway uses the tombstone as the starting point to investigate what the world she lived in was like Drawing on the latest archaeological discoveries and scientific techniques the author describes the development of Roman

York's legionary fortress, civilian town and surrounding landscape. He also looks at manufacturing and trade and considers the structure of local society along with the latest analytical evidence for people of different ethnic backgrounds. Aspects of daily life discussed include literacy, costume, cosmetics and diet. There are also chapters dedicated to the abundant York evidence for religion and burial customs. This book presents a picture of what one would have found on the edge of a great empire at a time when York itself was at the height of its importance. With dozens of photographs, specially prepared plans and illustrations, this is an excellent study of one of Roman Britain's most important places.

Crafts and Social Networks in Viking Towns Stephen P. Ashby, Søren Sindbaek, 2020-02-19. Crafting Communities explores the interface between craft communication networks and urbanization in Viking age Northern Europe. Viking period towns were the hubs of cross-cultural communication of their age and innovations in specialized crafts provide archaeologists with some of the best evidence for studying this communication. The integrated results presented in these papers have been made possible through the sustained collaboration of a group of experts with complementary insights into individual crafts. Results emerge from recent scholarly advances in the study of artifacts and production: first the application of new analytical techniques in artifact studies (e.g. metallographic, isotopic and biomolecular techniques) and second the shifted interpretative focus of medieval artifact studies from a concern with object function to considerations of processes of production and of the social agency of technology. Furthermore, the introduction of social network theory and actor network theory has redirected attention toward the process of communication and highlighted the significance of material culture in the learning and transmission of cultural knowledge including technology. The volume brings together leading UK and Scandinavian archaeological specialists to explore crafted products and workshop assemblages from these towns in order to clarify how such long range communication worked in pre-modern Northern Europe. Contributors assess the implications for our understanding of early towns and the long term societal change catalysed by them, including the initial steps towards commercial economies. Results are analyzed in relation to social network theory, social and economic history and models of communication, setting an agenda for further research. Crafting Communities provides a landmark statement on our knowledge of Viking Age craft and communication.

Wales and the Welsh in the Middle Ages Ralph A. Griffiths, Phillip R. Schofield, 2011-12-15. This is a major contribution to the study of medieval Wales by a group of outstanding British historians writing in honour of one of Wales's most distinguished scholars and the biographer of Prince Llywelyn ap Gruffudd. The essays reflect exciting trends in the study of both Wales and the Middle Ages, including church building, chronicle writing, the comparative history of the law, valuable reassessments of town life and the implications of the Edwardian conquest of Wales.
