BETTER HEALTH

The World Health Organization has found that a diet low in animal products, while also higher in vegetables and fruit, was associated with a lower risk of heart disease, stroke, cancer, Type 2 diabetes, and various cancers. A plant-based diet rich in fiber, folate, and potassium is also associated with lower cholesterol, blood pressure and body fat. From studies to science, it's now clear that a plant-based diet is a safe and healthy, recommended way of preventing chronic disease and promoting healthy aging. Prevention is the best prescription.

A SUSTAINABLE FUTURE

We can make an immediate impact on the environment and our global warming simply by eating lower on the food chain. It requires an average of 1kg of plant protein to produce 1kg of animal protein, and 150 times more water. The UN reports that animal agriculture is responsible for 14% of global warming emissions worldwide, with cattle ranching and feed production accounting for over 70% of deforestation in the Amazon. The growing livestock sector is the largest source of water pollution worldwide. The time to act is now.

COMPASSION FOR ALL

It is better that in the day to coming millions of animals, mostly the humans, living under very a single roof for 9 months, kept almost constantly pregnant, the mothers are cruelly separated from their calves after birth, and later slaughtered, suffer with production alone. The egg industry destroys almost all male chicks each year as they are not considered profitable. Eggs are routinely subjected to treatment that would certainly be illegal if inflicted upon a lot of big birds of various breeds (continued)

COMMUNITY & SOCIAL JUSTICE

More can be fed as a plant-based diet: over 70% of grain grown in North America feed livestock, not people. Over 50% of the most polluted watersheds from livestock raising farms (mostly for meat-producing and related plant-based farms, as much that mercury is detected at the table. Plant-based is the most sustainable way to feed us.
