Automation: The Future of Weed Control in Cropping Systems Stephen L. Young, Francis J. Pierce, 2013-11-21 Technology is rapidly advancing in all areas of society including agriculture In both conventional and organic systems there is a need to apply technology beyond our current approach to improve the efficiency and economics of management Weeds in particular have been part of cropping systems for centuries often being ranked as the number one production cost Now public demand for a sustainably grown product has created economic incentives for producers to improve their practices yet the development of advanced weed control tools beyond biotech has lagged behind An opportunity has been created for engineers and weed scientists to pool their knowledge and work together to fill the gap in managing weeds in crops Never before has there been such pressure to produce more with less in order to sustain our economies and environments This book is the first to provide a radically new approach to weed management that could change cropping systems both now and in the future The Annual American Catalogue, 1872 Grasses Robert H. Mohlenbrock, 2001-07-31 Since the publication of the first edition of Grasses Panicum to Danthonia in 1973 twenty additional taxa of grasses have been discovered in Illinois that are properly placed in this volume In addition numerous nomenclatural changes have occurred for plants already known from the state and many distributional records have been added This second edition updates the status of grasses in Illinois Paul W Nelson has provided illustrations for all of the additions Because the nature of grass structures is generally so different from that of other flowering plants a special terminology is applied to them In his introduction Robert H Mohlenbrock cites these terms with descriptions that make the identification of unknown specimens possible Mohlenbrock's division of the grass family into subfamilies and tribes is a major departure from the sequence usually found in most floristic works in North America Synonyms that have been applied to species in the northeastern United States are given under each species A description based primarily on Illinois material covers the more important features of the species The common names Pacific Grass Billion Dollar Grass or Japanese Millet Thread Love Grass and Goose Grass are the ones used locally in the state The habitat designation and dot maps showing county distribution of each grass are provided only for grasses in Illinois but the overall range for each species is also given
