Dixon,Dale Jorgenson,2013-01-08 Top scholars synthesize and analyze scholarship on this widely used tool of policy analysis in 27 articles setting forth its accomplishments difficulties and means of implementation Though CGE modeling does not play a prominent role in top U S graduate schools it is employed universally in the development of economic policy This collection is particularly important because it presents a history of modeling applications and examines competing points of view Presents coherent summaries of CGE theories that inform major model types Covers the construction of CGE databases model solving and computer assisted interpretation of results Shows how CGE modeling has made a contribution to economic policy

A Global Assessment of the Economic Effects of Export Taxes David Laborde,Carmen Estrades,Antoine Bouët,2013-02-01 This study has been undertaken to understand and evaluate the potential negative consequences of export taxes which are implemented by many countries today and which are not disciplined by any international agreement This paper uses a new detailed global dataset on export taxes at the HS6 Harmonized System 6 level level and the MIRAGE Modeling International Relationships in Applied General Equilibrium global computable general equilibrium model to assess the impact of export taxes on the world economy We find that limitations on export taxes would have worldwide effects the average export tax on global merchandise trade was 0.48 percent in 2007 with the bulk of these taxes imposed on energy products The removal of these taxes would increase global welfare by 0.23 percent which is a larger figure than the expected gains from the World Trade Organization's Doha Development Round Both developed and emerging economies such as China and India would gain from such policies even if they currently impose export taxes Medium and small food importing countries without market power such as the least developed countries would also benefit from the elimination of export restrictions especially during food crisis situations Both the energy sector and the export taxes implemented by Commonwealth of Independent States countries appear to play a critical role in the overall economic impact of such a policy change However the fact that some countries such as Argentina would experience income losses due to such a policy change is a major challenge to overall positive reform in this area

Evolution of global agrifood trade and trade policy and implications for nutrition Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2025-02-11 While international agrifood trade is critically relevant for the availability and supply of food across many countries import tariffs are a policy instrument with relatively modest potential to steer consumers towards purchasing more nutritious food Employing a number of newly developed datasets this research project examines patterns and developments in the links between agrifood trade and nutrition and assesses how trade policy shapes food prices The analysis is undertaken at a global level with a focus on the Near East and North Africa NENA region a set of countries which is particularly dependent on agrifood imports The results show that agrifood imports are a critical source of calories macro nutrients as well as vitamins and minerals for most countries in the world On the supply side a small number of countries account for the bulk of globally traded calories and nutrients These findings show that calorie and nutrient availabilities are shaped significantly by global trade With regard to how import tariffs affect the relative prices of foods with different nutritional characteristics econometric estimations suggest that on average import tariffs have only a relatively modest effect on the relative prices of different foods The concentration patterns of caloric and nutrient supply in a small number of supplying countries reinforce calls to diversify global food markets and trade As for trade policy options the modest effects of tariffs suggest that exploring other domestic and trade policy options would be necessary to significantly improve nutritional outcomes
