History and the Construction of the Child in Early British Children's Literature Jackie C. Horne, 2016-04-22 How did the flat characters of eighteenth century children's literature become round by the mid nineteenth While previous critics have pointed to literary Romanticism for an explanation Jackie C Horne argues that this shift can be better understood by looking to the discipline of history Eighteenth century humanism believed the purpose of history was to teach private and public virtue by creating idealized readers to emulate Eighteenth century children's literature with its impossibly perfect protagonists and its equally imperfect villains echoes history's exemplar goals Exemplar history however came under increasing pressure during the period and the resulting changes in historiographical practice an increased need for reader engagement and the widening of history's purview to include the morals manners and material lives of everyday people find their mirror in changes in fiction for children Horne situates hitherto neglected Robinsonades historical novels and fictionalized histories within the cultural social and political contexts of the period to trace the ways in which idealized characters gradually gave way to protagonists who fostered readers sympathetic engagement Horne's study will be of interest to specialists in children's literature the history of education and book history

Images of Time Arie Wilschut, 2012-11-01 What makes history difficult to learn

is the fact that one has to travel in time Studying events and circumstances from a time perspective different from our own is something that doesn't come naturally to people It is an ability that has to be acquired This book discusses teaching and learning history from the perspective of passage of time Time experiences exist in different shapes and dimensions one of which is historical time The specific characteristics of the kind of time are defined in this study based on philosophical and psychological insights as well as on theory of history The differences with other kinds of time such as daily time and social time are outlined Six key concepts of historical time are then defined chronology periodization relics anachronism contingency and generations meaning a specific way of dealing with the generations of our predecessors The main issues for teaching historical thinking are described using these six categories An inventory is made of what is known about them from existing research and what questions still need further investigation An empirical study is reported about the means students preferably use to orient in historical time timelines and numbered years attached to events or imaginative associative contexts It is demonstrated that images of time are the optimum means for historical orientation An historical consciousness of time is essential to an open democratic society The one dimensional perspective of the present is broken up it is shown that alternatives are possible that the present is only the coincidental result of a contingent development and might have been totally different and that the views held by people have changed may change now and certainly will change in the future All of this can enhance tolerance open mindedness and promote a healthy societal debate This study provides insights into the kind of history teaching that might be helpful in developing this

Memory, History, Justice in Hegel Angelica Nuzzo, 2012-04-05 This reconstruction of the work of dialectical memory in Hegel raises the fundamental question of the principle that presides on the articulation of history and indicates in Hegel's philosophy two alternative models of conceiving history one that grounds history on ethical memory the other that sees justice as the moving principle of history

In Quest of History Jiří Příbáň, Karel Hvíždala, 2019-10-01 On the centennial of the Czechs gaining their independence award winning Czech journalist Karel Hvíždala and Cardiff based philosopher of law Jiří Příbáň used the occasion to examine key moments in Czech history from the ninth century to the twenty first Covering such a broad scope allows the authors to look into the past and question how Czechs have viewed their history at different points and what that means for the present and future Employing the form of a dialogue Hvíždala and Příbáň raise and explore issues for the broader public that are normally reserved for university seminars or avoided completely It's an interesting book because simply by considering the ideas the authors of In Quest of History put forth the reader loses his certainty of what is true and what is the common consensus he becomes an individual Milan Kundera author of The Unbearable Lightness of Being Testaments Betrayed and The Festival of Insignificance This contemplation by two Czech intellectuals of Czech history the national narrative collective memory and contemporary politics should be mandatory reading for understanding the deeper context of our current crisis Jacques Rupnik professor of political science at Sciences Po Two men who are as European as they are Czech raise a question Where are we headed In answering they deliver a solid classic What an inspiring dialogue Petr Pithart Czech politician and signatory of Charter 77

Propaganda and Power in the Age of Globalization Simon Sherratt,2024-08-15 Following victory in World War II the US and Western Europe claimed to be the champions of the political ideals of democracy and freedom along with the economic ideal of free market capitalism Two decades into the twenty first century these once noble ideals have been reduced to little more than myths myths that bear scant resemblance to the realities of the powerful political and economic forces that dominate the Western world This book examines the dangerous prospects we face as the societies built upon these myths begin to fragment and crumble In an open and accessible style this book argues that much of the confusion that currently plagues the West is due to the fact that its social economic and political systems are saturated by a little understood and rarely acknowledged system of propaganda This book seeks to clear away this propagandistic facade in order to reveal where power really lies in Western societies examining how this power functions and how it has corrupted the ideals of democracy freedom and capitalism to suit its own ends This volume will be of value to those interested in modern history and social and political history

War Words: Language, History and the Disciplining of English Urszula Clark,2021-10-01 Debates about the nature of literacy and literacy practices have been conducted extensively in the last fifteen years or so The fact that both previous and current British governments have effectively suppressed any real debate makes the publication of this book both timely and important Here Urszula Clark stresses the underlying ideological character of such debates and shows that they have deep historical roots She also makes the point that issues regarding the relationship between language and identity especially national identity become sharply focused at times of crisis in that identity By undertaking a comparison with other major English speaking countries most notably Australia New Zealand and the USA Clark shows how these times of crisis reverberate around the globe
