Stamper, 2012-12-06 Organisational semiotics is a discipline that is concerned with the interrelationships between individuals and groups and between humans and technology functioning in organisations and society Organisational semiotics opens up the prospect of theory building and the development of new methods and techniques to gain insights into organised behaviour and enacted social practices in the presence and absence of various technologies It shares common interests with many other approaches to information and organisations such as computer science computational semiotics organisational engineering and language action perspective The common vision shared by these approaches is to treat organisations and related information systems and technologies within a unified semiotic framework with particular reference to the huge range of issues that elude many traditional disciplines The analysis and design of information systems develops methods for solving the practical problems but offers no rigorous theoretical foundation for them or how information functions within and between organisations The semiotic perspective accommodates the individual and the social the human and the technical intra and inter organisational interactions at a level of detail that is required in the study modelling design and engineering of new and alternative organisational and technical systems This perspective is outlined in the chapter presentations of Information Organisation and Technology

Types Katrin Susanne Mühlfeld,2012-12-06 The range of products and services that are traded on business to business markets is very broad It encompasses such heterogeneous goods as standardized software machine tools and power stations Against this background of heterogeneity the development of undifferentiated one for all marketing programmes is neither promising from the practitioner's perspective nor consistent with an application oriented approach in marketing science Yet at the same time the pitfalls of overemphasizing the particularities of individual transactions which lead to a lack of generalizability are to be avoided As a response to this dilemma various conceptions for systematizing transactions on business to business markets have been developed in the past years Out of all of these concepts which are rather varied in terms of their methodology are the objectives of identifying meaningful types of transaction processes usually referred to as transaction or business types and of deriving corresponding recommendations to guide marketing practice Out of all of them is however also a deficit The approaches presented to date take into account only the heterogeneity that prevails at a certain point in time They do not capture the potential change of market offerings over time that is the heterogeneity that arises from shifts between the different types in the course of time The existent approaches are hence static in the sense that they treat the criteria that are used for categorization as given They do not interpret them as variables that are susceptible to the transaction parties design
