Concepts of Value in European Material Culture, 1500-1900 Bert De Munck, Dries Lyna, 2016-03-09 In contemporary society it would seem self evident that people allow the market to determine the values of products and services For everything from a loaf of bread to a work of art to a simple haircut value is expressed in monetary terms and seen as determined primarily by the objective interplay between supply and demand Yet this price mechanism is itself embedded in conventions and frames of reference which differed according to time place and product type Moreover the dominance of the conventions of utility maximising and calculative homo economicus is a relatively new phenomenon and one which directly correlates to the steady advent of capitalism in early modern Europe This volume brings together scholars with expertise in a variety of related fields including economic history the history of consumption and material culture art history and the history of collecting to explore changing concepts of value from the early modern period to the nineteenth century and present a new view on the advent of modern economic practices Jointly they fundamentally challenge traditional historical narratives about the rise of our contemporary market economy and consumer society

Craft Theory and Contemporary Architecture Grant Alford,2025-05-28 This book offers a comprehensive exploration of craft theory in relation to contemporary architecture Craft is an old and familiar idea but the line between craft and art or craft and mere manufacturing for example is notoriously hard to describe In architecture a similarly blurred line between the design process on one hand and the physical making of buildings on the other lies at the center of various debates about what it means to do architecture The growth and development of craft theory in recent years suggest new insights into these architectural debates but situating the meaning of craft within architecture within today's technological landscape is a complex problem Alford responds to this challenge by collecting various narratives from craft theory and other fields and discerning among them new lenses through which to view contemporary architectural practice Episodes from this expanded view of craft in architecture go beyond predictable accounts of Ruskin and Morris to envision new models of practice new ways of engaging other building professionals and new ways for architects to understand their own labor and the nature of how and what kinds of things they themselves craft

Architecture is changing and within the ongoing story of craft explored in this book are new and surprising ways to understand design and construct the built environment Written for students and scholars this book challenges and extends the legacy of craft thinking in architecture

Art, Design, Craft, Beauty and All Those Things... Donald Richardson, 2023-08-18 Responding to many recent calls for redress and restitution, Richardson summarises the historical and current situation and attributes its problematics to the fact that theorists and historians have taken the concept of art as a generic that includes both design and craft, which are actually and validly distinguishable from art by application of the concept of functional or else ignored the two entirely. Considering the concept of functional, he maintains, calls into question the view that the three may be sub-classes of the one class, whereas in a work of art, typically, there is a resolution of the tension between form and content. In works of design and craft, the resolution is between form and function. How this recognition can clarify the issue informs the entire book. The book's other major thesis is the realisation that aesthetic values are inherently human and that therefore they apply not only to art but to life in general. Far from being frivolous or a mere emotion, the aesthetic is a sense of equivalent psychic status to sight and hearing, and like them is employed at almost every moment of our daily lives, which fact grounds art, design, and craft deeply in human life. This is reflected in the universal use of the human form, including the exhibition of sexual characteristics in art. The eternal conflict between making art and making a living from making art is examined and contrasted to the rarely recognised but positive role of design in planning and industry. Richardson also critiques common theories of representation and composition.

including creativity Albertian perspective and scientific and geometric theories of beauty and composition also the relevance of the camera and the computer in the field
