Knockwood,2018-06-29T00:00:00Z Freeman Douglas Knockwood is a highly respected Elder in Mi kmaw Territory and one of Canada's premier addictions recovery counsellors. The story of his life is one of unimaginable colonial trauma, recovery and hope. At age 6, Knockwood was placed in the Shubenacadie Residential School where he remained for a year and a half. Like hundreds of other Mi kmaw and Maliseet children, he suffered horrible abuse. By the time he reached his twenties, he was an alcoholic. He contracted tuberculosis in the 1940s, had one lung and several ribs removed. Having hit rock bottom, Knockwood gained sobriety in his thirties through Alcoholics Anonymous. He went on to become a much sought-after drug and alcohol rehabilitation counsellor in Canada. Many of Doug's initiatives have been implemented across Canada and used by thousands of people, both Indigenous and non-Indigenous. Looking back now, says Doug, "I realize I wasn't only helping them; they were helping me to gather strength in my presentations, in feeding them the knowledge I received the same as it was fed to me. That helped me to gain confidence in myself, doing all these things that I didn't know I could yet do." This book is an in-depth look at Doug Knockwood's life that also casts a wide and critical glance at the forces that worked to undermine his existence and the indomitable spirit of a man who recovered from yet still struggles to overcome those forces. Harps Are Not for Angels

Aida Mulieri Dagort,1999-07-13 Growing up in a large Italian family, Aida Mulieri Dagort wanted to be a professional musician all her life. Most of her family members played instruments as music was their daily bread, and Aida was nurtured in a rich musical environment. Thus began her journey through much struggle and determination as she accomplished her goals of success. Aida became a musician under contract with two motion picture studios as a member of their recording orchestras during the heyday of Hollywood film scoring, the 1940s through the early 1960s. Harps Are Not For Angels is her story of that accomplishment and the joys as well as the pressures it imposed on her life. Musicians under contract to the studios were in a prized position in the profession, and the envy of many players who had not made the grade to earn a chair in one of those orchestras. The politics and pressures of this professional work were on a high level, and your job could be at stake at any moment. Meanwhile, Aida doubled as a wife and mother in an era when women were expected to do little else. Along the way, Aida chronicles the professionals in the film music business she encountered and relates stories involving the history of Los Angeles and its connection to the music world at the time. The city was a cultural cornucopia at the end of the second World War as many artists sought refuge from political oppression, and Hollywood reaped the benefits. Although it was a good life in the stresses and high demand of such professional work, Aida found herself diagnosed with breast cancer. Her recovery and subsequent retirement from the music business inspired her to explore her many other talents, such as teaching children with learning disabilities and fine art painting, which she did for her own enjoyment. But for Aida, nothing was as exciting nor as stimulating as her career in the motion picture studios of Hollywood's golden era, as related here in her experiences, both informative, challenging, and insightful. After reading her story, you will see that in fact Harps Are Not For Angels. The New Kid Andrew Moss,2014-05-31 The author reflects on his growing up there and how those experiences have affected his life.
