Building your support system has to do with finding and using resources that will help you feel more effective as a caregiver and less alone with your problem. The way that you build yourself a support system is through networking. Start by making a list of people who can act as initial resources for you in your community, such as the public health nurse, your neighbours, your local Alzheimer chapter, and then call them. These calls will give you further leads to follow up, and this is how your support system or network is built.
