Valley is crowded with ghosts the ghosts of Native Americans and Dutch colonists of Revolutionary War soldiers and spies of presidents slaves priests and laborers Possessions asks why this region just outside New York City became the locus for so many ghostly tales and shows how these hauntings came to operate as a peculiar type of social memory whereby things lost forgotten or marginalized returned to claim possession of imaginations and territories Reading Washington Irving's stories along with a diverse array of narratives from local folklore and regional writings Judith Richardson explores the causes and consequences of Hudson Valley hauntings to reveal how ghosts both evolve from specific historical contexts and are conjured to serve the present needs of those they haunt These tales of haunting Richardson argues are no mere echoes of the past but function in an ongoing contentious politics of place Through its tight geographical focus Possessions illuminates problems of belonging and possessing that haunt the nation as a whole

Arcadian America Aaron Sachs, 2013-01-08 Perhaps America's best environmental idea was not the national park but the garden cemetery a use of space that quickly gained popularity in the mid nineteenth century Such spaces of repose brought key elements of the countryside into rapidly expanding cities making nature accessible to all and serving to remind visitors of the natural cycles of life In this unique interdisciplinary blend of historical narrative cultural criticism and poignant memoir

Aaron Sachs argues that American cemeteries embody a forgotten landscape tradition that has much to teach us in our current moment of environmental crisis. Until the trauma of the Civil War, many Americans sought to shape society into what they thought of as an Arcadia, not an Eden where fruit simply fell off the tree, but a public garden that depended on an ethic of communal care and whose sense of beauty and repose related directly to an acknowledgement of mortality and limitation. Sachs explores the notion of Arcadia in the works of nineteenth-century nature writers, novelists, painters, horticulturists, landscape architects, and city planners, and holds up for comparison the twenty-first century's and his own tendency toward denial of both death and environmental limits. His far-reaching insights suggest new possibilities for the environmental movement today and new ways of understanding American history.

Hastings-on-Hudson Hastings Historical Society, 2008. Sloping toward the deep Hudson River, forming a natural mooring for ships and a natural amphitheater for viewing river activity, and the Palisades, Hastings-on-Hudson inherited its shape, industry, and sense of place from its geography. Natural resources provided for native inhabitants and later tenant farmers, and Hastings marble built urban buildings while town water powered mills. Still, it was the people who gave Hastings its character. From tenant farmers and rebels to country gentlemen, from mill owners to mill workers, from shopkeepers at the heart of the village to commuters who lived on the hills, all worked together to make Hastings the place they dreamed it could be.
