National Institute on Aging,1987 Alzheimer's Disease Abraham Fisher,Israel Hanin,Chaim Lachman,2012-12-06 Alzheimer's disease is a primary neurodegenerative disease whose incidence and prevalence is rapidly approaching epidemic proportions A major reason for this is that man is living longer than he has ever lived before and the likelihood of contracting the disease is significantly greater within the elderly portion of the population The problem becomes even more acute in the light of recent estimates which predict that the number of people living beyond the age of 65 is expected to continue to increase The impact of these statistics on the family and the health care industry in terms of time effort and cost are staggering A recent report issued by the Michigan Task Force on Alzheimer's Disease and Related Conditions 1987 effectively underscores this last point Each person with a dementing disease requires an average of seven years of care either at home or in a residential care facility Care provided at home is estimated to cost about 12 000 annually for a total of 84 000 per person This is a conservative figure however because many persons with dementia spend their last few years in a nursing home at an average cost of 22 000 per year and some spend from 10 to 15 years in a nursing home for a total cost of 220 000 to 330 000 Dementia and Memory Simon B. N. Thompson, 2006 With an expanding older population it is crucial that we develop our understanding of how to treat those suffering from dementia and related diseases This accessible book provides extensive information on the different types of dementia and on memory problems more generally It will be an invaluable resource for the trained healthcare and medical professional and for the student reader Neuropsychology and the Dementias Siobhan Hart, James M.
