ABSTRACT

Interactive videodisc (IVD) technology, which combines the visual power of television with the flexibility of the microcomputer, offers attractive possibilities for applications to training and education in developing countries. For example, it can increase the efficiency of training, can teach students in scattered locations, and can supplement the work of live teachers when the latter are scarce. But, IVD requires substantial front-end costs, as well as a local team with a unique blend of talents. The first trial applications in developing countries should provide a high pay-off in the relatively short-term. Candidate applications drawn from the work of development assistance agencies include remedial science teaching for prospective college entrants, and training in the operation, maintenance, and repair of complicated machinery.

INTRODUCTORY COMMENTS

The marriage of the videodisc and the microcomputer has produced a powerful technology, the interactive videodisc (IVD), that combines the visual and dramatic impact of television with the ability of the computer to enable a user to tailor the presentation to individual needs.

IVD technology has great potential to complement or substitute for live instructors in situations where the latter are scarce or unobtainable, where Convention on Cultural Diversity is a landmark agreement in modern international law of culture. It reflects the diverse and pluralist understanding of culture as well as its growing commercial dimension. Thirty diplomats, practitioners and academics explain and assess this important agreement in a commentary style. Article by article, the evolution, concepts, contents and implications of the Convention are analysed in depth and are complemented by valuable recommendations for implementation. In an unprecedented way, the book draws on the first-hand insights of negotiators and on the experience of practitioners in implementation, including international cooperation, and combines this with a good deal of critical academic reflection. It is a valuable guide for those who deal with the Convention and its implementation in governments, diplomacy, international organizations, cultural institutions and non-governmental organizations and will also serve as an important resource for academic work in such fields as international law and international relations.

Streaming Video Resources for Teaching, Learning, and Research Julie A. DeCesare, 2014-03-27 According to a 2012 Ithaka study, 80 percent of faculty in the humanities and 70 percent in social sciences use video film and non-textual resources for teaching undergraduates. Streaming video is not simply an accommodation to distance learners; rather, it is an expectation for the curriculum and a valuable tool for teaching critical thinking skills, analysis, and the use of primary sources. This issue of Library Technology Reports will help you recommend high-quality video resources for faculty and researchers with information on 75 YouTube channels for teaching, learning and research; 11 interdisciplinary video and multimedia sites with annotations on features and content; 6 open access course collections; 5 university channels and collections; Using video with Moodle, Sakai, LibGuides or WordPress; Mass market video sites that offer library-friendly business models.
