The Condition, Improvement and Town Planning of the City of Calcutta and Contiguous Areas E. P. Richards, 2014-08-21 By 1900 the British had undertaken various types of urban planning in their colonial territories but the early twentieth century brought new ideas and the birth of the modern planning movement In India these new planning ideas inspired several specialized reports after 1900 most of which drew explicitly on British or occasionally German ideas The most complete of these studies was the Richards Report on Calcutta prepared for the Calcutta Improvement Trust and published in 1914 Its major concerns included the building and widening of roads slum clearance and improvement legislation and suburban planning As background it included written and visual documentation of living conditions through charts photographs and maps Richards emphasized that conditions in Calcutta differed greatly from those in urban Britain and made some allowance in that regard In general however his report exemplifies the attempt by British planners along with Indian elites to impose their vision on colonial cities Richards report was well received by leading British planners of the day A notice in Garden Cities and Town Planning claimed that it was the most complete report on town conditions and possibilities which has yet been issued While the immediate impact of the report in Calcutta is moot Richards was highly critical of the past practices of local officials and his views were unpopular with his superiors the Richards Reports remains a crucial insight into both the development of modern town planning and the colonial period in India

Strategic Environmental Assessment: Integrating Landscape and Urban Planning Fabio Cutaia, 2016-07-20 This book explores the opportunities offered by Strategic Environmental Assessment in the context of guaranteeing the synchronized integration of landscape in all its aspects within urban plans thereby helping to overcome the constraints of rigidly framed sector focused laws and a purely aesthetic concept of landscape In pursuit of this goal various scholars have previously attempted to construct arrays of indicators relating to the different conceptions of landscape This book critically examines the most complete proposals of this nature systematizing and comparing them and finally offering some guidelines with respect to their codification within specific application protocols After opening chapters exploring the origins of the problem and analysing the European normative frame for Strategic Environmental Assessment two case studies are described and discussed A model is then presented for the evaluation of the effects of urban plans on landscape including in cultural and perceptual terms The author demonstrates that when suitably employed Strategic Environmental Assessment can indeed facilitate the integration of environmental economic and social sustainability into urban planning

Perspectives on Planning and Urban Development in Belgium Ashok K. Dutt, F.J. Costa, 2013-03-09

Belgium is a small country but its planning traditions are rooted in a heritage which has been greatly enriched by its central location in the West European community of nations. Medieval Renaissance and industrial age planning and urban design gave Belgium many examples of architectural masterpieces especially in the city centers. During the post World War II period Belgian planners and politicians legislated national planning laws that divided the country into 48 planning regions also called sub regions and sectors and empowered the municipalities communes with potent legal instruments to direct land development in accordance with their plans. Preparation amendment and execution of these plans in a democratic society with a strong laissez-faire tradition have been painstaking but nonetheless significant tangible results have been achieved. The purpose of this book is to explore and assess the successes and failure of Belgian planning and make this record available in English so that they may remain facets of Belgian planning. The general socio economic and historical background is provided with a view to understanding the theoretical legal physical and selected topical aspects of Belgian planning. In doing so a multi disciplinary approach has been taken and the authors have been selected from a variety of disciplines. Professor Louis Albrechts of the University of Leuven is a planning theorist. Ms Brigitte Beernaert and Mr Karel Vroom are practicing planners. Beernaert is also a planning historian. Legal and administrative backgrounds are represented by the planning experts. Dr

The Genesis of Modern British Town Planning William Ashworth, 2024-11-01

First published in 1954 The Genesis of Modern British Town Planning is a study from a historical standpoint of the social and economic factors which have made town planning one of the normal functions of government. The author begins with an examination of the rapid growth of towns in the nineteenth century and the consequent emergence of inescapable new problems of health morality and economic efficiency and goes on to discuss the chief ways in which a remedy for these problems was sought in the later part of the century. Separate chapters are devoted to new model villages and towns to the spread of suburbs and to the improvement of already established towns by means of clearance and rebuilding schemes by law control and efforts of private philanthropy The final section of the book shows how the successes and failures of earlier attempts at reforms stimulated a demand for something more comprehensive which found expression in the town planning act of 1909 and ends by considering the influences that brought to the town planning movement a new strength and importance in the 1930s and the war years The author has drawn his material from a wide range of government and local authority reports the writing of philanthropists and social workers local guides and topographical works and the book will be of great value to those interested in social history architecture and urban sociology

Urbanismo - Gabriel Alomar Esteve: Mallorcan Town Planner Richard Buswell, 2022-04-15 Gabriel Alomar Esteve 1910-1997 was an architect town planner and historian His early ideas in town planning were largely pragmatic seeking to address problems of the quality of life and the future traffic circulation in the historic core of his native city Palma and its suburbs He inherited plans for reform from previous generations of Mallorcan planners including Eusebio Estada 1843-1917 Bernat Calvet 1864-1941 and Guillem Forteza 1892-1943 who in turn were influenced by Idelfonso Cerdà 1815-1876 the Barcelona planner and his concept of the eixample or ensanche Some of his plan for Palma was financed by the enigmatic Juan March but under the post Civil War policy of autarky little of what he proposed was built However a short sojourn in the United States at MIT in the mid 1940s brought him into contact with American and British theories Much of his practice developed during the Franco regime although he had little sympathy for its politics Later he designed few other complete town plans but his influence on the social aspects of Spanish planning in the 50s and 60s was considerable His subsequent professional practice was largely devoted to urban conservation and the development of green spaces in cities and towns His ideas are located between Anglo Saxon planning theories and Mediterranean urbanismo when town planning as a discipline began to emerge from its origins in engineering and architecture as part of its transition from planeamientos to proyectos
