

Concise
Hallmarks on Gold
& Silver

William Chaffers

ASSAYING of gold and silver was introduced by King Edward I in 1300 so that each item would have a hallmark attesting to its quality. The first mark was a leopard's head and some form of leopard or lion's head has remained as part of the English gold and silver manufacturer's hallmark symbols ever since. Hallmarks identify country of manufacture, the city or town in which the piece was assayed and when, and the maker's mark. William Chaffers' indispensable guide will enable the reader to quickly and accurately identify pieces and will also illustrate the wide variety and historical background of hallmarks issued by the nine assay offices in England, Scotland and Ireland.
