Conditions Of Happiness:

Conditions of Happiness R. Veenhoven, 2013-11-27 This book is about the degree to which people take pleasure in life in short happiness It tries to identify conditions that favor a positive appreciation of life Thus it hopes to shed more light on a longstanding and intriguing question and possibly to guide attempts to improve the human lot During the preceding decades a growing number of investigations have dealt with this issue As a result there is now a sizable body of data Yet it is quite difficult to make sense of it There is a muddle of theories concepts and indicators and many of the findings seem to be contradictory This book attempts to bring some order into the field The study draws on an inventory of empirical investigations which involved valid indicators of happiness 245 studies are involved which together yield some 4000 observations for the main part correlational ones These results are presented in full detail in the simultaneously published Databook of Happiness Veenhoven 1984 The present volume distils conclusions from that wealth of data It tries to assess the reality value of the findings and the degree to which correlations reflect the conditions of happiness rather than the consequences of it It then attempts to place the scattered findings in context As such this work is not a typical study of literature on happiness

The Mind and its Stories Patrick Colm Hogan, 2003-09-29 There are profound extensive and surprising universals in literature which are bound up with universals in emotion Hogan maintains that debates over the cultural specificity of emotion are misdirected because they have ignored a vast body of data that bear directly on the way different cultures imagine and experience emotion literature This is the first empirically and cognitively based discussion of narrative universals Professor Hogan argues that to a remarkable degree the stories people admire in different cultures follow a limited number of patterns and that these patterns are determined by cross culturally constant ideas about emotion In formulating his argument Professor Hogan draws on his extensive reading in world literature experimental research treating emotion and emotion concepts and methodological principles from the contemporary linguistics and the philosophy of science He concludes with a discussion of the relations among narrative emotion concepts and the biological and social components of emotion
