cal. .58, made by Bilharz, Hall & Co." of wood, together with ten packing crates for them." Production of the Bilharz, Hall & Co. muzzleloading carbines continued through the summer of 1863. However, the company was having difficulty getting the parts needed. On 19 September the company initially requested from Captain Hutter 300 musket cones (percussion nipples; the quantity subsequently was reduced to 100), emery cloth, and steel in sizes (fifty pounds of two-inch square bar stock reduced to ten pounds), and fifty pounds of $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch stock (later eliminated). The company closed the request with the statement that "We will pay the prices as the Department may set & which you can charge us with on our account for the same. We want the articles asked for to manufacture the muzzle loading Carbine as per contract." This request was followed by another in October for 200 additional musket cones, and again for fifty pounds of two-inch square and the same amount of $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch square steel."

Captain Hutter provided another interesting insight to the status of the firm's contract on the 29th of October 1863. On that date he addressed the Confederate Chief of Ordnance, Colonel Josiah Gorgas, directly, stating,

As the contract of Bilharz, Hall & Co. will expire on the 7th day of December next, they will doubtless be willing to sell the greater part of their machinery.

I think it would be highly desirable for the Department to take a part of it at least. I need some machines that they have, and other arsenals will probably need such as would not be required at this place."

On the first of November Colonel Gorgas gave Captain Hutter permission to hire a machinist to appraise those items Hutter thought appropriate to purchase for the Danville Carbine Manufactory. On

Confederate Carbines Musketoons:

Confederate Carbines & Musketoons John M. Murphy (M.D.), Howard Michael Madaus, 2002 Confederate Carbines & Musketoons John Montague Murphy, 1986 Confederate Carbines & Musketoons John Montague Murphy, 1986 U.S. Colored Troops Defeat Confederate Cavalry Edwin W. Besch, 2017-04-10 Wilson's Wharf was the first major clash between U.S. Colored Troops and the Army of Northern Virginia. The 1st and 10th USCT infantry regiments supported by two cannons and two U.S. Navy gunboats faced 11 detachments of veteran Confederate cavalry who were under orders to kill every man. Union commander General Edward Wild and one armed abolitionist refused General Fitzhugh Lee's demand for surrender, telling Lee to go to Hell. The battle resulted in a victory for the mainly black Union force. This book describes the action in detail and in the larger context of the history of black U.S. servicemen, including the British recruitment of runaway slaves during the Revolutionary War, the black Colonial Marines who joined the British in torching Washington in the War of 1812, and the South's attempts to enlist slaves in the final months of the Civil War. Confederate Odyssey Gordon L. Jones, 2014-11-15 Throughout his life Atlanta resident George W. Wray Jr. (1936-2004) built a collection of more than six hundred of the rarest Confederate artifacts, including not just firearms and edged weapons but also flags, uniforms, and accoutrements. Today Wray's collection forms an integral part of the Atlanta History Center's holdings of some eleven thousand Civil War artifacts. Confederate Odyssey tells the story of the Civil War through the Wray Collection. Analyzing the collection as material evidence, Gordon L. Jones demonstrates how a slave-based economy on the cusp of industrialization attempted to fight an industrial war. The broad range of the collection includes many rare or one-of-a-kind objects, such as a patent model and early inventions by gun maker George W. Morse, the bloodstained coat of a seventeen-year-old South Carolina soldier, battle flags made of cloth imported from England, and arms made in Georgia, the heart of the Confederacy's burgeoning military industrial complex. As Civil War history, Confederate Odyssey benefits from the study of material remains as it bridges the domains of professional scholars and amateur collectors, such as Wray. The book tells of the stories, significance, and context of these artifacts to general readers and Civil War buffs alike. The Wray Collection is more than a gathering of relics; it is a tale of historical truths revealed in small details. The Battlefields of the Civil War William C. Davis, 1996 The Battlefields of the Civil War tells the stories of thirteen of the most important battles, including First Manassas, Shiloh, Antietam, Vicksburg, Gettysburg, and the Wilderness. William C. Davis not only describes the events and outcomes of those great engagements but also delves into the characters of the army commanders, revealing in many cases just how much their personalities influenced the actions of their subordinates and ultimately the outcome of the battles themselves. Rounding out the narrative are 35 full-page color photograph spreads of Civil War artifacts, including flags, uniforms, artillery projectiles, and arms; 28 color paintings of soldiers in various regiment uniforms; and 166 historical photographs. The Library of Congress Civil War Desk Reference Margaret E. U. S. and Confederate Arms and Armories During the American Civil War James B. Whisker, 2002. Virginia at War, 1865 William C. Davis, James I. Robertson, 2012-01-06. The final volume in this comprehensive history of Confederate Virginia examines the end of the Civil War in the Old Dominion. By January 1865, most of Virginia's schools were closed, many newspapers had ceased publication, businesses suffered, and food was scarce. Having endured major defeats on their home soil and the loss of much of the state's territory to the Union army, Virginia's Confederate soldiers began to desert at higher rates than at any other time in the war, returning home to provide their families with whatever assistance they could muster. It was a dark year for Virginia. Virginia at War 1865 presents a striking depiction of a state ravaged by violence and destruction. In the final volume of the Virginia at War series, editors William C. Davis and James I. Robertson Jr. have once again assembled an impressive collection of essays covering topics that include land operations, women and families, wartime economy, music, and entertainment, the demobilization of Lee's army, and the war's aftermath. The volume ends with the final installment of Judith Brockenbrough McGuire's popular and important Diary of a Southern Refugee during the War.
