Lufkin,2016-01-21 Folk art is now widely recognized as an integral part of the modern Chinese cultural heritage but in the early twentieth century awareness of folk art as a distinct category in the visual arts was new Internationally intellectuals in different countries used folk arts to affirm national identity and cultural continuity in the midst of the changes of the modern era In China artists critics and educators likewise saw folk art as a potentially valuable resource perhaps it could be a fresh source of cultural inspiration and energy representing the authentic voice of the people in contrast to what could be seen as the limited and elitist classical tradition At the same time many Chinese intellectuals also saw folk art as a problem they believed that folk art as it was promoted superstitious and backward ideas that were incompatible with modernization and progress In either case folk art was too important to be left in the hands of the folk educated artists and researchers felt a responsibility intervene to reform folk art and create new popular art forms that would better serve the needs of the modern nation In the early 1930s folk art began to figure in the debates on social role of art and artists that were waged in the pages of the Chinese press the first major exhibition of folk art was held in Hangzhou and the new print movement claimed the print as a popular artistic medium while for the most part declaring its distance from contemporary folk printmaking practices During the war against Japan from 1937 to 1945 educated artists deployed imagery and styles drawn from folk art in morale boosting propaganda images but worried that this work fell short of true artistic accomplishment and pandering to outmoded tastes The questions raised in interaction with folk art during this pivotal period questions about heritage about the social position of art and the exercise of cultural authority continue to resonate into the present day Chinese investigation ultimately concerns not only this individual artist but also the effect of early modern changes on an artist's mode of working and his self image in the West as well as the East. The study touches upon expanding international trade and the rise of middle class art markets including print markets not only in China but also in the Dutch Republic in circa 1630-1650. Bentley investigates the specific rhetoric of different categories of images including Chen's non literal figurative works, literal commemorative portraits, his printed romance drama illustrations and his printed playing cards. Bentley's investigation takes in issues of studio practice including various types of image replication.

The Language of Color in China Jun Zhou, Gail Taylor, 2019-01-17. This is the first book to explore color history in Asia. Color is a natural phenomenon and a fundamental element of the universe and offers a medium to communicate with others globally. It is a language of signals such as traffic lights, signs or symbols and an essential part of society. Color attracts people's attention and transmits important information. As such, color language denotes all of the activities of human history and has been associated with changes in society, economic development and dynasties replacing the old with the new. The book brings together many elements of Chinese history with reference to the topic of color and has evolved from the authors' respective interests in art and design, teaching and research, consultancy and publishing. The topic will be of increasing importance in the future as a consequence of China's increasing influence in the sphere of global culture.
