PILKINGTON,1876 The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells,1996 The Barony Bill Conner,2013-02-28 Excerpts from the Story It was the morning of their fourth day at sea and Nathan awakened suddenly sat up something was different He threw on a few clothes and ran out on deck It didnt take long to figure out what was different The Catherine Ross was running with full sail aloft filled by a strong gale and Captain Stuart was making good use of the wind while it lasted Thus far the passengers had been spared the usual scourge of new seafarers seasickness However on the fifth day it caught up with Reverend Wolde The cook took charge fed him special food and said it would run its course in a day or so However Nathan was not reassured and felt certain he would be buried at sea Two days later hed made it out on deck with his wife and was enjoying the fresh air when a call came from the Crows Nest Ship Ahoy Well now this was something new and they quickly scanned the horizon But there was nothing there to see A crew member who saw them looking walked over and said nothing would be visible from deck level until late the next day That evening Ian said it might be the MacTavish clipper Anne Ross bound for Newfoundland but they would have to wait until the two ships got closer to be sure Nathan and Mary Catherine were sitting underneath their hammocks discussing the events of the day Nathan dont you think its a bit odd for two ships to meet in the middle of the ocean like this I doubt the Captains just want to say howdy to each other I believe theres more to it Well my dear Nathan replied I know you pretty well Youre not thinking its some sort of conspiracy so it must be one of your premonitions All right Mary Catherine lets hear it Its the weather Nathan The other Captain is going to warn us were sailing into a storm The carriages stopped on top of a hill overlooking the Firth of Tay and the family got out to look Directly opposite them atop a high bluff was The Barony Mary Catherine gasped Oh my God Nathan surely that cant be where were going can it I believe thats got to be your fathers place my dear Youre almost home now She grabbed the front of his coat with both hands and shook him Reverend Wolde that is not my home My home is across that ocean in the mountains of Virginia where I live happily with my family Look at me Nathan help me I cant do this alone She believed him to be sleeping in his chair but the Baron heard the door close and stood on trembling leg Father was all she got out before the tears came and she was folded into his arms My beautiful daughter how lovely you are If only your mother could see you now he sobbed

Locomotive Engineers Journal ,1889 Extradition, Politics, and Human Rights

Christopher H. Pyle,2001 Three hundred years ago few people cared about the murky past of new arrivals to the United States and the countries they had left made few efforts to pursue them to their new home Today with the growth of bureaucracy telecommunications and air travel extradition has become a full time business But the public s knowledge of and consequent concern about extradition remains minimal aroused from time to time by newspaper headlines only to fade In this readable and compelling history of extradition in America Christopher Pyle remedies that ignorance Using American constitutional law and drawing on a wealth of historical cases he describes the collision of law and politics that occurs when a foreign country demands the surrender of individuals held to be terrorists by some and freedom fighters by others He shows how U S policymakers have attempted to substitute deportation for extradition and turn the surrender of a foreign national or even an American citizen into a political rather than a judicial process Beginning with the New England Puritans refusal to surrender to the regicides who had signed the death warrant of King Charles I he traces the attitudes and ideologies that have shaped American extradition practice culminating in the efforts by the Reagan and Bush administrations to turn the legal extradition process into an executive tool of state policy Along the way we meet such legal luminaries as James Madison and John Stuart Mill William Rehnquist and Oliver North as well as pirates and fugitive slaves anarchists and refugees drug lords and runaway sailors Woven throughout this story is the author s belief that current developments in extradition law ignore or actually violate the principles of individual liberty due process and humanity on which we claim our country was built As he remarks in the Introduction Extradition involves the surrender of human beings persons under the protection of our Constitution to foreign regimes many of which are unjust This reality was well understood in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when the United States was a refuge for the victims of European oppression but it has been disregarded frequently in the twentieth century as we have sought to stem the tide of immigration and develop advantageous economic and political relations with autocratic regimes of every stripe Author note Christopher H Pyle is Professor of Politics at Mount Holyoke College He is the author of several books and Congressional reports and has frequently testified before Congress on the subject of extradition and deportation
