Can Protected Areas Contribute To Poverty Reduction Opportunities And Limitations:

Can Protected Areas Contribute to Poverty Reduction? Lea M. Scherl, 2004 At head of cover title Chief Scientist Office Conservation and Recreation in Protected Areas Yun Ma, 2016-05-12 This book provides a comprehensive and up to date comparative study of the management and resolution of conflicts between conservation and recreation in protected areas in the US and China Competing claims on the use of nature increasing regulation of land use and recreational activities and the conflicting goals between conservation and development have led to a rise in conflicts in the designation and management of protected areas How to effectively manage and resolve these conflicts has become a challenge for both legislators and managers By adopting an institutional dimension in legal interpretation this book critically examines how such conflicts are dealt with in the legal regimes of the US and China while exploring interactions between legislatures agencies and courts The book searches for a plausible solution to improve the legal framework of protected areas in China by emulating pertinent mechanisms developed in the US whilst also presenting legal and policy recommendations to the US This informative book will be useful for legal scholars in Chinese law nature conservation law administrative law and comparative law Linking Conservation and Poverty Reduction Robert Fisher, Stewart Maginnis, William Jackson, Edmund Barrow, Sally Jeanrenaud, 2012-05-04 This book aims to inspire the conservation community not to regard poverty reduction as someone else's job but to take responsibility for it as part of ecosystem restoration Though no solutions are perfect the text and examples given offer encouraging and useful guidance Gill Shepherd poverty and landscapes thematic leader IUCN Forest Conservation Programme This book could be the catalyst for a real paradigm shift not just in capital cities and international conference centres but also on the ground in locations where poor people are struggling to make a living Policy Matters praise for the first edition High levels of rural poverty in many of the world's ecosystems make it an ethical and practical imperative to find more equitable and realistic ways of achieving conservation Livelihoods of the rural poor and options for conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity are so intimately entwined that they are better addressed through an integrated approach irrespective of whether the primary motivation is one of development or one of conservation This highly accessible book a revised edition of the 2005 book Poverty and Conservation Landscapes People and Power offers a grand overview of the issues and a conceptual framework for addressing poverty reduction in the context of conservation and conservation in the context of poverty reduction It will appeal to professionals working in the field as well as to students across the fields of conservation development and sustainability It looks at the rationale for addressing the links between conservation and poverty reduction arguing that such a focus is both ethically essential and a source of opportunities It also reviews experiences in dealing with people and conservation and identifies some key lessons and concepts The book presents case studies illustrating various approaches and a discussion of some of the issues that appear when implementing combined conservation and poverty reduction The book emphasizes the importance of multiple spatial scales and negotiating trade offs between scales It also tackles the complex issue of institutional landscapes and the way in which changes at various institutional levels can lead to different and often more positive outcomes The Final part summarizes some of the main features of the authors integrated approach and identifies some of the challenges involved in efforts to combine conservation and poverty reduction Published with IUCN The World Conservation Union Tourism and Protected Areas Robyn Bushell,Paul F. J. Eagles,2007 Bringing together the diverse experiences of park agencies and managers conservation NGO s and international agencies this book examines the role of tourism in protected area management Using case studies from around the world it provides examples of successful partnerships between community public and private sectors It also explores how tourism can be used as a management tool for financing protected areas It concludes by summarizing the lessons learnt and the challenges facing protected areas in the future Linking Conservation and Poverty Reduction ,2008 First Published in 2008 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Regional action plan for the protected areas of East Asia 2006-2010 , Sustainable Financing of Protected Areas Lucy Emerton,Joshua Bishop, Lee Thomas,2006 It has become clear during recent global deliberations on biodiversity conservation that achieving Protected Area PA financial sustainability will require major changes in the way that PA funding is conceptualized captured and used With many if not most PAs facing funding crises both in terms of the amount of funds available and how those are used there is an urgent need to expand and diversify PA financial portfolios and to ensure that funding reaches the groups and activities essential for biodiversity conservation A range of innovative financing mechanisms have been developed and implemented to increase funding for PAs This document aims to review and assess the status of a variety of these mechanisms the major obstacles and opportunities for their implementation and the potential for improvement Remote Sensing Applications in Monitoring of Protected Areas Yeqiao Wang ,Zhong Lu,Yongwei Sheng,Yuyu Zhou,2020-12-02 Remote sensing has been successfully applied in monitoring of protected areas around the world With intensified impacts of climate and environmental change protected areas become increasingly important to serve as indicators of and buffers against the impacts of the disturbances Remote sensing plays an irreplaceable role in this frontline of challenges The subjects and contents of the articles collected in this book reflect the state of the art applications of remote sensing for capturing dynamics of environmental and ecological variations of the protected areas The examples include revealing the level growth rate trend and distribution pattern of the night time light of global protected areas quantifying the energy budget water cycle and carbon sink over the Three River Headwaters Region in the hinterland of the Tibetan Plateau monitoring wetland change in a cross boundary zone between Northeast China and the Russian Far East and monitoring applications and change analyses in protected areas of boreal forests dryland shrubs coastal salt marshes large lakes and temperate semi humid to semi arid transitional agricultural regions using a variety of sensor data with innovative approaches Also included in this collection is a bibliometric analysis that suggests the intellectual structure in remote sensing of protected areas from the perspective of journal publications

Poverty and Conservation R. J. Fisher, 2005 Despite endorsements of the concept of sustainable development and the linking of sustainable development with the Millennium Development Goals progress towards the eradication of poverty has been disappointing The underlying principles of sustainable development need to be more critically and actively applied to both poverty reduction and biodiversity conservation While recognizing the need for better integration of poverty reduction and conservation objectives by both developmental and conservation agencies particular attention is paid to the reasons why conservation should do better in contributing to long term sustainable development and more immediately to poverty reduction

Social Assessment of Conservation Initiatives Kate Schrekenberg, 2010 Despite widely voiced concerns about some of the negative implications of protected areas and growing pressures to ensure that they fulfil social as well as ecological objectives no standard methods exist to assess social impacts This report aims to provide some

Evaluating Effectiveness Marc Hockings, 2006 The Framework for management effectiveness developed by the IUCN World Commission for Protected Areas was published in the first version of this Best Practice Guideline It is further explained and interpreted although not substantially altered in this version A number of key guidelines for good practice in evaluation are presented from many practitioners around the world and important needs and directions for the future are identified

Geological Heritage and Biodiversity in Natural and Cultural Landscapes Antonio Miguel Martínez-Graña, José Ángel Sánchez Agudo, 2021-09-10 Geological Heritage has very diverse elements both for its intrinsic nature and for its social and scientific significance These elements have a scientific dimension stratigraphic geomorphological lithological paleontological etc and a landscape dimension both with implications for territorial management In territorial management and planning it is essential to carry out inventory and cataloging of places of natural and social interest to establish a comprehensive policy The identification and valuation of the geological and biological heritage and their interaction in the landscape should favor the conservation and preservation of this natural and historical heritage Sustainable development implies rational use that prevents the degradation or loss of these unique environments of the natural environment as well as a dissemination and awareness of landscape resources for a better understanding and enjoyment integrating activities of both environmental education and nature tourism

Tourism and National Parks Warwick Frost, C. Michael Hall, 2012-08-21 In 1872 Yellowstone was established as a National Park The name caught the public's imagination and by the close of the century other National Parks had been declared not only in the USA but also in Australia Canada and New Zealand Yet as it has spread the concept has evolved and diversified In the absence of any international controlling body individual countries have been free to adapt the concept for their own physical social and economic environments Some have established national parks to protect scenery others to protect ecosystems or wildlife Tourism has also been a fundamental component of the national parks concept from the beginning and predates ecological justifications for national park establishment though it has been closely related to landscape conservation rationales at the outset Approaches to tourism and visitor management have varied Some have stripped their parks of signs of human settlement while increasingly others are blending natural and cultural heritage and reflecting national identities This edited volume explores in detail the origins and multiple meanings of National Parks and their relationship to tourism in a variety of national contexts It consists of a series of introductory overview chapters followed by case study chapters from around the world including insights from the US Canada Australia UK Spain France Sweden Indonesia China and Southern Africa Taking a global comparative approach this book examines how and why national parks have spread and evolved how they have been fashioned and used and the integral role of tourism within national parks The volume s focus on the long standing connection between tourism and national parks and the changing concept of national parks over time and space give the book a distinct niche in the national parks and tourism literature The volume is expected to contribute not only to tourism and national park studies at the upper level undergraduate and graduate levels but also to courses in international and comparative environmental history conservation studies and outdoor recreation management
